JACKSON JUBILEE SINGERS

There is a subtle wit in Negro singing that charms an American audience. Even when negro voices are untrained, negro melodies have a fascination all their own.

Among the best of the negro-singing companies is the Jackson Jubilee Singers, which has toured America and proved popular with audiences everywhere through its delightful interpretation of Negro folk-lore and music.

Robert Jackson, the organizer of the company, is a nephew of the late John H. Jackson, president of Lincoln University, Jefferson City, Mo. He is a graduate of the University of Kansas and dean of Western University, Kansas City, Kan. He is also head of the Department of Music at the latter-named university.

The Jackson Jubilee Singers, as an organized singing company, is the result of his vision and work. It was Mr. Jackson's great desire to bring to the people of America a really authentic program of all varieties of music typically within the province of the negro. In this he has splendidly succeeded.

The program in this respect of negro songs, Indian chants, plantation melodies and dances, religious hymns, voodoo songs, old tribal melodies and spirituals.
