BONDING FOR HILL SCHOOL ADDITION

When public officials, elected to dispense comforts, and conveniences to the subject could to leave reconditions under which we live, they generally figure out the cost of such improvement, and then ask the people to furnish the money. A bond issue is the means used to obtain the

This school district, which is growing faster in population than anyone ever thought it would at this period in its history, is in need of more land upon which to erect school buildings. That is the reason why the school board has set December 8 as the time to bond for $54,500.00 with which to buy land west of the old Hill school for future

The school board, knowing that it must work quietly in order to secure options at the lowest possible price, did abtain these options at a price which they say is economical to the taxpayers. Certainly, they ought to know what they are talking about, and their request, for the $54,500.00 will probably win the approval of local electors.

If there is anything amiss in this December 8 election, it, may be said to be the short time in which, the electors are allowed to settle the problem in their own minds. The Eccentric, however, perhaps because it has had a chance to go into the proposition more thoroughly than the average person, believes that this bond issue should carry.

We also believe that, in the future, the school board we also believe that, in the future, the school board should never seek bonds of any kind unless it provides for a reasonable period of discussion among the taxpayers. To spring a bond issue out of a clear sky and then expect the voters to vote "yes"—all within a week or two—is really asking quite a bit of the people.

NOTHING NEW FOR 2,000 YEARS

When Professor E. S. King, of the Michigan State College, told members of the Birmingham Exchange club last week that "the weight has made no real discovery for 2,000 years," we presume that he was referring to things that "moths do not consume, or rust decay"—in other words, the learned professor was dealing in things that are ETERNAL TRUTHS. We certainly agree, then, that the world has not made any new discovery since Christ earls.

EFERNAL IRUTHS. We certainly agree, then, that the world has not made any new discovery since Christ established a TRUTH 2,000 years ago.

For TRUTH is ETERNAL—and neither moths nor rust can obliterate it from existence; only apathy and lethargy, those things that dull the inner conscience, can prevent the appearance of TRUTH from the thoughts and acts of humankind.

Physically and scientifically, the world has progressed immeasurably since the long ago—but such creations may totter and fall, and be built up again to crumble under the drash of human greed; recorded history will prove this.

What the world needs is the discovery of methods that will make Christianity Applied a desirable motive for a greater number of inhabitants upon this orange-shaped planet.

OUR ANNEXATION PROBLEMS

Annexation seems to be a popular term in the vicinity of Birmingham. Adjacent subdivisions, realizing that sparsely settled areas are unable to set up their own form of government in an economical fashion are casting their eyes upon Birmingham; and this is fitting and proper. Why should one hesitate to take stock fir a going, dividend-paying concern—whether it be one that operates for financial gain or for the dispensation of public comforts and conveniences?

When next April comes along to extend eternity beyond the bounds of March, ideal people will be called upon to decide whether or not they want Birmingham to annex approximately 1525 acres of nearby territory; they will be given ample opportunity to discuss the relative merits of the various propositions, and it is hoped that the public mind will pass up entertainment programs long enough to inform themselves of the conditions and circumstances surrounding these annexation problem

Golden Rule week ends on Golden Rule Sunday. It is the annual roll call for the Near East Relief—America's greatest overseas charity.

But for those whose hearts are right, every day is Golden Rule day and every week is Golden Rule week.

Little children are as hungry on Tuesday as on Sunday, and in September or June as well as in December.

The calendar has no red-letter days when little children—or grown-ups, either—can call a truce on hunger.

The world knows the story of how these children of the Near East came to be orphans. The world knows how their fathers and mothers lost their lives in the massacres and by famine or sickness.

Also, the world knows that other story—that better story—of how the Near East Relief, backed by the American people, stepped in at the hour of darkest despair and saved the children—gathered them in from street and deserted hovel and blazing desert, or found them freezing and starving, clad in rag, when he certible winter set in out there in Asia Minor.

The world will not be coatent with merely saving them and then leaving them helpless and unprotected. Americans still have this sacred duty before them—continue to feed and shelter and clethe and train for citizenating the helpless little ones who can look nowhere else for these things.

Observance of Golden Rule day may be as elaborate

Observance of Golden Rule day may be as elaborate or as perfunctory as you like. The important thing is the giving of a contribution, or the signing of a check which may arrive in time to drive from some little face the shadows of misery and despair.

THE HILL WAY

A pretty road one day we found,

Mid emer'ld hills it curved and wound
Where grass and trees and flow'rs abound
And dancing streamlets played.
Enchanted by its beauty rare
And loth to leave a spot so fair,
We stopped to dream and loiter there
And rested in the shade.

Would that it might be so in life.
When buffeted with care and strife
To chance upon a way that's rife.
With happy things and bright.
The glory of the grass grown hills.
The rhythm of the murn ring rills
A tired and weary heart instills.
With peace and strength and light.
