Buick Solves Bright Headlight Problem

Motorists who have been forced to grope their way blindly against the glare of automobile headlights will welcome any change in equipment which makes night driving safer for all concerned.

That dimmers have been ineffective is best shown by the fact that some states have laws prohibiting the dimming of headlights. On the other hand, dimming at the approach of another car is made compulsory in other states.

Most effective and safe lighting is provided on the new Buick models introduced in August. For country driving, and when the road ahead is clear, the beams from the new Buick headlights send a broad path of light the entire width of the road for a long distance ahead.

At the approach of another car the light may be directed downward just in front of the car, but with full strength of the beam retained, furnishing adequate light for the driver and at the same time taking the glare of headlights from the eyes of the approaching motorist.

This effect is obtained by shifting the current in the lamps from one filament to another. The control is conveniently mounted on the steering post under the driver's hand. There is nothing mechanical about the controlled light. Reflectors, bulbs, etc., are stationary. The light is thrown downward by means of specially designed lens built into the lamps.

Hudson-Essex Co. Eclipses Its Record

Hudson-Essex is drawing to a close the most successful year in its history. The quarter million mark in production has been passed, and final figures will run considerably over this total, as business is going along much faster than is usual at this season of the year.

Not only have Hudson-Essex sales been sensationally good in the United States, but demand for them in foreign countries is reported as largely increased. In Great Britain, the Essex is widely spoken of as one of the year's most successful cars, with sales running far ahead of any other American six.

In Canada the growth of Hudson-Essex popularity has been much ahead even of the showing in the United States, while South America, Africa, Australia, Europe and the Orient have come strongly ahead.

The reason behind such a world-wide growth must be interesting to the man which is considering the investment of his money in a car," said Charles Boughner, of Boughner Bros. Garage, local Hudson-Essex dealers. "When the whole world agrees that a product is excellently good, the fact becomes hard to dodge."

"Hudson and Essex appeal because they offer a basic value which any man can understand. They specialize not in so-called "features" of construction, but in great basic values. The more informed a motorist becomes on just what makes up an automobile, and the cost of an automobile, the more he is attracted by the Hudson-Essex values."

"That is true in the United States or anywhere else, and that is why Hudson-Essex has won so immense a following in the year now closing."

Packard Car Is Taken On Tour Of Honolulu

Mr. and Mrs. Horace H. Mullin, of Los Angeles, recently completed a novel automobile trip. With their Packard six in the auto hold of a steamer, they sailed to Honolulu. Their car was ready to take them to their hotel when the ship drew in at the dock.

They found that the automobile roads in and around the island city were well laid out and so perfectly surfaced that they could drive with as much comfort as on a mainland city. They made many extended trips through the most luxuriant tropical scenery. Mr. Mullin found that there are 10,000 automobiles on the islands and that highway improvements are going on constantly.

Mr. and Mrs. Mullin took their car by boat to the islands of Maui, Oahu and Kauai and toured on the remarkably fine automobile roads which have been laid out on these islands. On their return to the United States they toured through the giant redwood forests of Northern California before returning to Los Angeles.

Dodge Brothers, Inc. have always built a good, sound, long-lived product. They have never built "yearly models" and never will. They do not make frequent expensive changes simply to catch the whim of the hour. On the contrary, they devote themselves steadfastly to the improvement of a car that has been good from the very beginning. This process of improvement has now been going on for 11 years. Always up-to-date, it is now strikingly attractive. Style and smartness stand out in every line.
