ARGUMENTS IN FAVOR OF SPENDING $12,900 ON WATER MAINS. (Continued from Page One.) The present situation can be considerably improved without great expense by providing a better circulation. A larger volume of water is very essential so that it will be available in case of fire and where percentages of increase are given hereafter the total of such increase will be obtained in case of fire only. Although the domestic supply will also be greatly increased, the size of the main feeding district will be sufficient to provide the full capacity of all of their branches. With a hydrant open, however, and especially with the pump attached, the full capacity of the main can be obtained at that particular point.
