Show Window Selling

- Your show window either invites people to come into your store—or it discourages them from entering.
- The first impression received by persons glancing toward a show window is that of light—always light. A thoroughly well lighted window will hold the eye—and the step of the passer-by. Conversely, a poorly lighted window will create a feeling of indifference.
- A well lighted window is the first step in a sale. It is itself a salesman, effective and relatively low salaried. Many, very many store-keepers forget this.

Thursday evening, May 28, the Baldwin auditorium will be the scene of "The Dressmaker From Paris," and "Style Show" by the proceeds from which will be used by Oakland County Rotarians to aid crippled children. Have you purchased your tickets for this? Besides seeing something worthwhile, you'll be rendering material aid to a worthy cause. Get your tickets before the house is sold out.

This is annual "Cleanup Week" in Birmingham. Local streets this week presented a rather unlovely appearance. For nearly every home, had on its front curb line one or more receptacles containing a conglomeration of rubbish. Funny, isn't it, how a home accumulates so much stuff?

"Yep," agrees Billy Brown of Bates street. "But the world ought to be told that most of the stuff in the receptacles originally contained chillsauce and horse manure."

As Hamlet would have said, were he a resident of this school district, "Did you vote Tuesday or did you not vote Tuesday—that is the question." Regardless of how you voted, you did vote Tuesday, and you are congratulated. In those days of strenuous living, the voting booth is too often neglected for the moving picture show.

Despite the fact that Robert W. Fenton, reformer of the law, has advised local citizens to keep watchdogs in their homes to ward off burglars, it is reported that dogs have raised in price.

Did you make a contribution to the Birmingham Community House Roll call last week? Birmingham should be complimented on having such an institution. How many boys and girls do you suppose it has helped, in one way and another, since it was started? And that's the test, isn't it?

Warnings are issued against the danger of a timber famine; however, to date nothing has been done to improve the supply of blockheads. "Woodn't that shiver your timbers?"

"Many things are going wrong in this world, but the graduating essays will soon straighten them out," says George H. Mitchell of Brown street. "It is claimed that cats are eating too many birds. I have seen cats about it, they'll probably declare that mice and milk are not a balanced ration."

It is now definitely ascertained that the reason you don't leave the family hearthstone is because the fire in the family cookstove has gone out, and the can opener has taken the place of the hot grid.

The chapies with the balloon trousers ought to be able to roll them in good shape so that they may help to mop up the kitchen floor. That's the way they do it in the U. S. Navy.

Here's a question for parents to solve: the girls say they have to include in "netting" because the boys demand it, while the boys say they have to yield to it because the girls turn them down if they don't.

Some of the folks who love to distribute litter in the streets of Birmingham would seem to have been making themselves thoroughly at home.

The city of Detroit proposes to build a $5,000,000 war memorial for the soldiers who died in France. Honestly, folks, aren't we a wonderful civilization? First we start a war, which costs human lives and much money; then we would spend more money on monuments. How far would that $5,000,000 go toward eliminating war from the next generation by uplifting their thoughts? The boys who died in France, as well as those who came back alive, are deserving of a kind of memorial that will actually "make the world safe for democracy." Monuments of war inspire... what?

Personally, we would rather give a hundred dollars toward the building of something that will teach people to be kind and courteous, grateful and loving, honest and industrious, than to give ten cents toward the building of a battleship.

Birmingham and Bloomfield township owe some kind of a monument to those who fought in the recent world war. Wouldn't it be a splendid thing to build them a monument—only make it in the shape of a Public Library; and fill the library with thoughts that UPLIFT and ENLIGHTEN boys and girls, men and women.

Telegraph Road Project Shows Much Southfield Development

By Helen V. Walker.

Providing the present plans for the new Telegraph road proved as it is, it is estimated, an extensive platting and building campaign will be started this summer. Such questions as the ultimate destination of the road or its exact destination have not been definitely determined, but the part of the road that is of interest to Detroit and local men that will be west of Birmingham. Along this road, where the state has staked off the right-of-way, there is marked activity in subdivision work.

Southfield Township will have the heavy development, it is indicated, this season. Already a number of plats are in the hands of the board for acceptance, and are direct results of the announcement of the new right-of-way.

Several local people are interested in Sunset Hills, one of the new plats that is now awaiting acceptance by the township board. The entire plat contains about 150 acres which is

The near sighted person may find that that brilliant, red or green object that he says is not a girl dressed in bright colors, but merely a newly painted gasoline pump.

It is claimed that posterity can pay for our improvements in Birmingham. "This is, perhaps, one reason why society yells and has to be carried about the house around two o'clock in the morning," opines Walter Y. Stanley, of Brownell street.

A fair grade of earth will grow many things. Beautiful flowers, edible fruits and vegetables, may spring from soil properly cared for. Weeds in abundance cover one's premises if no other seeds are planted; how like the earth is one's mind—surrounded with good books, fine people, a person may allow good thoughts to take seed, and thus bring about good acts for the benefit of mankind. Association with careless, careless people, will bring careless thoughts and careless acts for the benefit of mankind.

Too many people expect their dream to come true while they remain asleep—they need to wake up. Many orators spoil their speeches by failing to observe the proper proportion between length and depth. They are, of course, never lacking in bread (th).

A girl often increases a man's happiness by life by one word. Sometimes it is "yes" and sometimes it is "no."
