Red Crown
Is and Always Has
Been a Premium
Gasoline

FOR years it has been the standard by which all other gasolines are judged. It has been submitted to every known road and laboratory test. It has seen other brands of gasoline come and go. It has maintained its enviable position of leadership in the face of every sort of competitive sales inducement.

But the worth of Red Crown is inherent — it is built in — in every gallon, in every drop. There is no better gasoline than Red Crown. It is impossible to make a gasoline as good as Red Crown and sell it for a lesser price. If you pay less you get less.

The Standard Oil Company (Indiana) can sell Red Crown — A Premium Gasoline — at its present low price only because it manufactures and markets it in such tremendous volume.

Use Red Crown all the time and you will get greater efficiency, greater mileage, uniformity, dependability and Far Into the Night.

 So numerous are the labors performed by a certain village husband on Labor Day, that it's worth commenting on. This hard working man, who belonged to the branch of the laboring class called Salesmen, returned to his home in the village fog. The holiday and rest that was given to him by the Company. It was a celebration all right. In the grey gloom of the morning his wife sent him out to mow off the lawn. And after the sod came the shrubbery and flowers that needed attention. Armed with a pair of scissors the wife came out and calmly asked him to please trim the grass along the walks. The shears were dull. He needs must go to hunt for the stone to sharpen the tool. While he was out there back of the house, he thought he would get the broom to sweep off the walks. After one good hour's hunt he was rewarded for his search and returned to his tasks, victorious. As he sat on the steps to rest a little and draw a deep breath, his wife came out and presented him with a generous collection of dusty rugs to be cleaned up. Window washing was the next episode. Dinner time came. But before this laboring man could have a bite to eat he must be sent flying off downtown to purchase the Saturday's groceries—all on Monday morning. Silence was reigning in the downtown district. Traffic was resting from labors. A gang of the Negroes on board of a truck load of cement went smaling by, asleep in their nests of cement sacks. The village cops stood out in front of their domain, ready and willing to perform any labors. The seventy teachers were out viewing the town and talking of labors to come. From loyal husbands to teachers I've wandered. There's not a Great distance between the two, judging from the fifteen odd school m'ams who have been married in recent months. But the Good husband: He captured the Groceries and returned home. Where in mid-afternoon a dinner was served. He had by this time worked up an appetite, he said. In the P. M. his wife asked him to take her for a ride. He did. He had thought would take her a long way from Home—would do his work well while doing it at all. So they went for an hour or more till the car broke down. The driver got out and got under. Darkness descended. He spent two hours under the car. Where he tinkered and rested in peace, while the good wife waited. He managed to get back to town by dusk. The sun set and Labor Day with capital letters ended for him. Through almost a column she-how I've loved, while the Good husband worked.
