Famous Absinthe House Padlocked

NEW ORLEANS, La.—Ordered padlocked by U. S. District Judge Henry Burns, the Old Absinthe House, for more than a century at bourbon and Bienville streets, is closed. It has been the scene of one of the most colorful and romantic history in America.

Tiny flat bricks for the construction of the house were brought to New Orleans in the holds of sailing ships. The structure, tastefully faced with stucco, has a flagged inner courtyard with beautiful steep winding stairs and quaint balconies. The heavy plank doors and window shutters are fastened with great bars and hinges of iron, hand-hammered by slaves.

It has been the scene of famous gatherings and riotous revelry. Royalty has leaned against its bar. For generations absinthe was the only drink served there and the storeroom held what was said to be the greatest stock of "Veritable Pernod" in America.

General Andrew Jackson; Jean Lafitte, the debonair buccaneer of Barátaria who fought beside him at the Battle of New Orleans; William Makepeace Thackeray, English novelist; Theodore Roosevelt, and scores of other celebrities have sipped absinthe at the historic bar.

At this bar remains the ancient fountain of black and white marble, crowned with its costly sculpture, "The Slave Girl." Before this maiden many a fatal quarrel was begun, many a deadly duel was arranged.

But all is quiet now; the girl looks upon an unchanging bleakness. She is alone with her memories—but what memories!

LIBRARIAN SUGGESTS CHILDREN'S READING

Urges Mothers and Teachers To Select Books Carefully For Youngsters

Children's books were divided into three classes, those for children between the ages of 4 and 8, between 8 and 11, and between 11 and 15, by Miss Blanch Kerns, librarian at the Baldwin Public Library Tuesday in her talk to the Parent-Teachers' association of Hill School.

"There is a regular development of children's minds," Miss Kerns said, "and their reading should be selected accordingly. Don't get just 'a child book for children' when you are selecting books for your little folks at Christmas. Be careful in your selection. Consider his likes and dislikes, the development of his mind, and buy accordingly," she told parents.

Miss Kerns suggested a list of books that she has found suitable for children in her library experience. The list, all of which are to be had at the Baldwin Library follows:

For Children Between 4 and 8

Barrie, J. M.—Peter Pan and Wendy, retold for little people; Skinner, A. M.——Little Folks' Christmas Stories and Plays; Masterlinck, Maurice—Our Friend, the Dog, retold for children by John Martin; Underwood, W. L.—Wild Brother; Butler, E. P.—Jib-by Jones.

For Children Between 11 and 15

Hillyer—Child's History of the World; Cartwright, C. E. The Boys' Book of Ships; Miller, W. H.—The Boys' Book of Hunting and Fishing; Sherman, H. M.—Fight 'em Big Three; McNeil, Everett—Tony of the Iron Hand; Hawkes, Clarence—Pal o' Mine, King of the Turf; Hawkes, Clarence—Silver Sheene, King of Sled Dogs.

Opinions
NEVER UTTERED

Gleanings from the trail of an Eccentric staff member, gathered in stores and on the streets, together with the opinions whose utterance are purchased.

Raymond Girardin, city editor of The Eccentric: "I think that alarm clocks are sometimes useful; especially when they don't ring loudly in the morning. I like alarm clocks that have nice sounding bells; when they start in to ring they remind me of beautiful bells in some ancient cathedral, and they awaken all sorts of fancies and lull one to sleep again. Alarm clocks that I like are the kind that give accurate time; I wish that somebody would invent a method that would result in one's early and prompt rising." (Note: we hope that Ray reads this after the paper comes out. G. R. A.)

HOLLY—About 40 boys from the agricultural department of Holly High School, including a number of alumni Tuesday night attended the annual Christmas banquet held in the high school which proved to be one of the most successful ever held here. An educational and entertaining talk was given by Robert P. Allan on "Agriculture as Carried on in England and This Country."

Talks on club project work were given by Aden Highfield and Dunne Howe.

Frank Gromek presided as toastmaster.

PONTIAC—Because he pushed his 66-year-old father away from a potato bin during excitement over sale of some of the latter's, on December 3, Stephen Slobodanski, 27 years old, was fined $15 on an assault charge. The potatoes were owned jointly by father and son. The elder Slobodanski, it was revealed during the hearing, walked 20 miles to Pontiac after the affair, to inform sheriff's officers.

Miss Kerns also suggested Santa Gone Bryant's "How to Tell Stories to Children," and Anne Carroll Moore's "Three Owls" as fitting books for parents to read.
