Bank Account Grows Like Magic

LIKE the drip, drip, drip which so quickly fills the water bucket, the dollar, dollar, dollar that you add regularly to your bank account makes it grow like magic.

The fact that you're working hard to get the extra things you want is not enough. It is the amount you save that will put these "hoped-for" things in your hands.

Make your bank account grow like magic. Come in and start it today.

The case of Morgan vs. Potts it our local J. P. court attracted wide attention. The plaintiff was stiff into collect for a second-han filtver, which the defendant claims was given to him to get rid of it. The case hinged on whether El Howard had heard Potts asy he's pay for the car. En testified that wouldn't. He wasn't quite surviviel, way it was, but he made post tive oath it was one or the other.

Enoch Budd is somewhat disturbed over a flaw in the title to one of his houses. He's been trying for a week to meet attorney. Parks on the street to ask him in a social way what his opinion is. But so far his efforts have been in vain,

Somebody in Sam Price's barber shop raised the question yesterday as to what has become of all of the hat pins which were once so prevalent. No long ago the hat pin was serving a lot of necessary functions, and seemed solidly fixed forever. And now where is tt?

Joe Green has been applying frequent coats of fresh paint, to the window ledge in front of his grocery store. His action has caused several of our citizens the inconvenience of seeking a new resting place. They've been watching close for the ledge to dry, but they lost hope when Joe opened another bucket of paint.

Adam Bilird, one of our permanent batchelors, suffered an embarrassing experience in Hale's drug store the other evening. He went in when there was nobody around thinking he'd eat a dish of ice cream. But before he could get it finished, Dora Davis and some other girls came in Adam couldn't get out. He managed to pass the time by appearing to be deeply interested in looking at the bottles in the wall.
