How Amundsen Prepared For His North Pole Flight

BEFORE Amundsen started on his recent flight to the North Pole by dirigible he sent a hundred men on ahead to King's Bay to erect a hangar and a mooring-mast for his giant airship.

His wisdom and experience told him not to rely upon luck-but to be fully prepared for all emergencies.

There are unexplored years ahead of you. Will they find you ready and equipped for whatever comes?

A growing savings account started now, will give you a sense of security such as nothing else will. Send your dollars on ahead. Let them build a safe place for you to spend your declining years. SAVE!

Uncle Bill Bobbitt had the misfortune to go to sleep while sitting in the hot sun Saturday without his hat, and when he roused up, the top of his head was badly sunburned. He says that even the edges won't be combed now until his head cools down some.

An airplane passed over Folkburg one day last week, and gave a topic for considerable comment. Some thought probably it was carrying passengers up to the city, but Andy Dobbins, who caps the mail between the postoffice and the depot, said he could see distinctly that it said government mail on the side. He said if he was a mile younger, you'd see him up in the air with the mail. Somebody remarked that he gets up there a good deal as it is.

Frank Myers has picked up a lot in spirits these last two days. He's thought for a long time he had some serious ailment which was growing on him, and he's dreaded to go to a doctor and find out for sure. But he finally went to Doc Trinkle Tuesday, and Doc told him there was nothing wrong worth speaking of. Frank felt so good over it that he tried to pay Doc more than the regular fee.

Sandy Atkins has asked us to make casual mention of the fact that he's got a second-hand fivver which he'll sell cheap. If anybody is interested he'll be glad to take them out and show them the machine where he left it on the Bradley hill.

While Miss Sadie Baxter was playing some new pieces on her player piano the other night, she happened to look out and saw someone on the steps down by the walk. Her curiosity led her to investigate, and she found Charlie Nichols sitting there in deep thought. His voice trembled a little when he jumped up to beg her pardon. He said he had been playing a piece they had on the player piano in the barracks at Camp Taylor during the war. Hearing it again he said had taken him back with the boys in 1917.

Miss Mabel Young, one of our telephone operators, is back from a two week's vacation with her cousin up in the city. Among other things, she learned several new words while she was away, and she began to slip in our language considerably since her return. She says that after living in the city, it'll take her a while to get used to our limitations again.

Mrs. Lucy Baker is still striving to conquer her automobile. She imagined a day or two ago there was something wrong with the lights, and she went around to Ben Hobson's garage to see if they needed new wicks. She particularly directed Ben to see if the tail light ought to have a new red wick.

Jeff Patton, who sells life insurance and washing machines according to which a person wants, tried hard yesterday to sell Mrs. Hettie Thomas a washer. He was about ready to mark it down as a sale, but somebody talked Mrs. Thomas on the phone to talk about the new dress patterns at the Star store, and after that she just wasn't able to get her interested in his machine any more.

Eli Howard meant to go over to Bromwell today, but on the way to the depot he stopped to talk to Ed Lewis about the tariff question, and he missed the train.
