SUNRISE IN THE COUNTRY

The big round sun just peeping o'er the trees. A slender golden crescent first it seems. Then, soon floods with its gold and crimson the day rocked in the gentle morning byeze. Its grandeur sad or gay hearts does appease. The whole earth with a hood of glory feems. So real it is, yet familier it seems. As if to fairyland one held the keys.

And then the joyous song of all the birds,
The trees and all the sweet wild flow'rs in bloom,
All things awake to greet the morning sun!.
A scene too wonderful, too grand for words
That touches souls and robs them of all gloom,
A day, a glorious day but just begun! -Beatrice McDonald
