

Folkburg Items
P. G. COX, Lemmer

Our Town Board met last Wednesday night to dispose of important business. But Alex Powers, who is one of the members, got started to telling about some of the horse-trades he used to make, and the other matters were postponed until a later date.

Mrs. Amanda Bell is having her house repaired. She gave Tom by the contract. But Alex Powers, after he had bought the paint and had most of the north side covered with one coat, Amanda stopped him and said she had decided she wanted it white. Tom showed good self control, and after walking around for awhile he came back and told Amanda she was the boss.

Andy Dobbins, who carts the mail back and forth between the post-office and the depot, is complaining a good deal about people crowding his passage-way. He says the government mail is entitled to a clear road, and he's threatening to write to the Postmaster General about it.

The citizens of Folkburg got together pretty well in the Decoration Day program and much favorable comment has been heard about it. Uncle Bill Bobbitt lead our Civil War veterans at the head of the parade, and he says they finished stronger than anybody in the crowd. Old Cap Bowers got to wear the new suit which the boys bought him especially for the occasion, and he seemed to feel mighty good in it. The Women's Discussion Club meant to be in the parade, but they didn't get assembled in time, so they marched through town by themselves.

Marshall Bailey has been warning people to stop dumping their trash at the side of the streets for the rain to wash off. He says the signs indicate a dry spell.

A rumor was passed around town Monday that a man was going to see about the canning factory which Folkburg is hoping for. Will Deal, Dave Skinner, our two restaurateurs, spent a half hour on opposite sides of the depot waiting for the train to come in. But the only person to get off was Daisy Bell.

Sam Price, who does most of our local hair bobbing, got into a serious predicament yesterday. Miss Sarah Kiddie finally made up her mind to have her hair cut, and she went to Sam. While he was busy on the job he had the misfortune to sneeze, and it caused him to take out a big scallop in Sarah's bob which only nature can fix. Sam managed to get her out of the shop before she learned how she'd been disfigured, and when she came back five minutes later Sam had been gone for the same length of time. Sarah hasn't caught him yet, but she is showing determination, and interest is running high as to the outcome.

Harley Burton is still trying hard to invent something or other, and his latest device is a new kind of a clothesline. He got it ready to try out Monday just after his wife had finished the week's washing. It looked for a minute or two like it might work the way Harley thought it would, and then something went wrong and it let all of the clothes fall down in a lot of fresh dirt. Harley got off down town before his wife fully expressed herself along general lines.

Miss Mellie Robbins, who has been working a good while on a puzzle she saw in a magazine, got it completed this week and sent it in by registered mail. She is expecting the prize money any day now. Outside of taking a trip to Niagara Falls, she's not decided how she'll spend all the money.

Mrs. Lucy Baker has been seized with an ambition to learn to operate the family Ford, and has spread considerable consternation around town. She's had several close shaves, but they don't seem to discourage her any.
