MRS. NELLIE RICHARDSON CLIZBE

Over in Greenwood Cemetery, in this little, old town of Birmingham, is what the poet fancies to call "the city of the dead." To its population last Monday was added the body of Mrs. Nellie Richardson Clizbe, for 46 years a citizen of this community. Such is the way of life—part of all human life leads to the graveyard; the best part of it leads beyond the pale of the grave—to life everlasting. The best part of is that indefinable, yet tangible substance upon which is builded Eternity.

Yes, as far as one phase of Mrs. Clizbe's life is concerned, the grave has claimed its victory, a victory of vanity, composed of the things "that moths consume and rust decays." Yet the biggest part of her life is as deathless as God; we refer to those sweet characteristics of love and honor, friendliness and neighborliness, wifehood and motherhood, that made Mrs. Clizbe beloved wherever she went. This part of her will live forever—it can not die; it will be represented in the similar acts of other people who live now and in future generations—people who may draw an inspiration from all righteous lives.

For 46 years Mrs. Clizbe was a part and parcel of Birmingham; her sturdy character is as much a part of this community as are the splendid elms and maples that line our streets. Her lofty character is just as towering as the arched branches that shade us in the summer time, and just strong as any tree trunk that braves the blasts of a wintry wind.

She is gone from our midst; she remains in our memories. Nellie Richardson Clizbe is not dead, people like her never die!

THE GOOD LOSER.

It is said that an Indian never cracks a smile at things which amuse "palefaces" but when misfortune befalls, he laughs. The Indian's way toward the lighter side may not be the better but in refusing to be cast down by misfortune he sets a commendable example.

It may not be necessary to laugh about it. It may be no laughing matter, but to meet reverses standing up and with face to them is the wiser way. Losing money is the excuse for some to go out and kill themselves. Defeat in an undertaking on which one has set one's heart is not pleasant but there is something worse than losing money or meeting defeat. To lose courage to face conditions is worse. Some are spoken of as good losers. That does not mean that they enjoy losing. Nobody does, but in life there are losses and if they come they test the character's genuineness.

The Indian may not be a perfect model in all ways but if he does not stop to mourn over what he cannot help he practices a philosophy that is correct under the circumstances. It's useless to cry over spilt milk, is an old maxim. Far better to hustle around and find some other milk and that is what the individual of resource, the good loser and possessor of courage, does. Few if any great undertakings came to fruition without the promoters meeting with repeated failures while on the way to success. Had they stopped to bewail their ill luck, success never would have been gained.

It takes strength of character, courage, to persist when results are altogether adverse. What is in a person may not be revealed until misfortune befalls. When reverses come one may judge quickly whether courage or weakness is dominant. The world's admiration and sympathy go out to the good loser.

RUMOR

Bacon made an interesting analysis of rumor, which he calls by the name of fame. The tremendous power which rumor exorts was made use of by past rulers for their own ends.

He cites the following instances: "Musianus undid Vitellius by a fame that he scattered that Viteillius had in purpose to remove the legions of Syria into Germany, and the legions of Germany into Syria; whereupon the legions of Syria were infinitely inflamed. Julius Caesar took Pompey unprovided, and laid, asleep his industry and preparations by a fame that he cunningly gave out, how Caesar's own soldiers loved him not, and being wearied with the wars and laden with the spoils of Gaul, would forsake him as soon as he came into Italy. Livia settled all things for the succession of her son, Tiberius, by continual giving out that her husband, Augustus, was upon recovery and amendment . . . There be a thousand such examples; and the more they are, the less they need to be repeated; because a man meeteth with them everywhere."

Rumor may in some cases be more powerful than the open dissemination of information, for it stimulates the imagination, and those whom it reaches may be cited to far more drastic action than would be the case if they knew the actual facts. As men grow to think for themselves, to reason clearly and logically, the questionable effects of rumor will grow weaker.

MARCH WINDS.

The winds of March are singing,
Oh what a lonesome song!
Yet scarcely do we heed it,
For well we know ere long
The robins will be singing
While balmy breezes blow,
That gone and quite forgotten
Will be the cold and snow.

The roads are rough and icy,
The trees are gaunt and bare.
The coal bin almost empty
While frost stays in the air.
Though March brings stormy weather,
Its days so dull and drear
Are filled with glad rejoicing,
For Spring is almost here.

The winds of March are chanting
A weird and doleful tune,
A requiem; for winter
Is passing very soon.
Oh March winds, do your utmost!
You can not make us sad.
You're bringing us the Springtime,
So wonderful and glad.

Just Bits Of News Gleaned From Old Files Of The Eccentric—The Items That Make Up the Historical Background Of the Birmingham Of Today

43 YEARS AGO

A great big bear astonished the natives of Birmingham on Tuesday.

A daily mail is now running between Franklin and Southfield. Verily Uncle Sam is good.

One of the most important stock transfers made in this vicinity recently is the purchase by J. N. Heath of Southfield of the celebrated Jersey bull, "Wolverine King," from James Tidd of this place.

Our readers will please exercise a little leniency towards us this week. Everything is up side down and nothing in its place and no place for anything. No sooner did we assist our printers to get the office moved, heavy presses, imposing stones, cases of type, etc., elevated to the dignity of their new third story home in the postoffice building, when they set up a yell for "copy." Just think of scribbling news items or brief little flashes of wit, with your head on a barrel of waste paper, and your feet under the job cases. Patience, my countrymen, patience.

A clergyman in Pontiac, Mich., it is alleged, went to sleep on the platform at a recent union meeting, and being requested to offer a prayer grunted out with a yawn: "God damn it! kindle it yourself, Maria."

A recent letter from Florida says that no doubts can be entertained as to the rapidity and performance of new settlements in Florida. They are springing up as if by magic all over the length and breadth of the land, and prices are obtained for town lots which would appear almost fabulous in many of the old cities of the east. It is claimed, and perhaps not very erroneously, that the population of the State has nearly doubled since the census of 1880.

25 YEARS AGO

Miss Florence M. Bolard of Connecticutville, Pa., is visiting her cousin, Miss B. A. Bigelow.

Will VanEvery is home from Harper Hospital, Detroit.

Bert Blakeslee of Bay City was the guest of his parents the first part of the week.

Now we just think if the mud was not fifteen inches deep Frank Blakeslee and Ed Lamb would be making garden. They say all pumpkins will be planted.

Mrs. Marian Wooster is home again from a few weeks' visit with her son, James, at his hotel in Clarkston, where "Jim" is making a little money and building up a nice trade. Success, James.

Married, at the home of the bride on Brown st., Wednesday evening, March 20, 1901, Charles Parks of Troy and Miss Ida McKinney, Rev. M. Bartram officiating. The young couple are now pleasantly settled in their farm home south of this place and the best wishes of hosts of friends in this vicinity are extended to them.

We have the pleasure of looking over a very unique program printed in French entitled, Le Bourgeois Gentilhomme," a very entertaining play presented at Vassar College by students of that school. Among the actors' names appears Mlle. C. Poppleton who was assigned one of the leading as well as most difficult parts. The young lady spoken of is Miss Carrie Poppleton of this place, who is one of the brightest students at that popular institution of learning.

A "STRAW VOTE" ON SUNDAY MOVIES

Responding to numerous requests from its readers to put on a "Straw Vote" in Birmingham regarding the question of running a motion picture theater here on Sundays, The Eccentric in this issue presents a questionnaire on the subject. Each week, over a period of perhaps a month, The Eccentric will publish the results of the "Straw Vote" before each issue goes to press. It is believed that this will afford the people of Birmingham a chance collectively to register their opinions on this much discussed question.

All answers should be mailed or brought into The Eccentric office; they must be signed, although the signatures will be kept strictly in confidence. All unsigned answers will not be counted in this "Straw Vote." Here is the questionnaire:

Do you favor Sunday shows in Birmingham?

Are you opposed to Sunday shows in Birmingham?
