Miss Detzer Tells Women Law Should Be Substituted For International Conflict

HAS DONE RELIEF WORK

"No international dispute can be settled by arbitration and none can be settled by war."

These words of Arthur Ponsonby express the basis of the main purposes of the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom, to outlaw war and to substitute peace for war, according to Miss Dorothy Detzer, executive secretary of the league, who spoke before the Oakland County chapter at their card party and tea last Friday. The affair was held at the Community House for the benefit of the Florida Relief Fund.

Miss Detzer has but recently returned from Europe, where she attended the International Summer School at Geneva, Switzerland, and the International Congress of the League in Ireland. Before she became connected with the league, two years ago, she did relief work with the Quakers for four years in Europe. "It was seeing women and children starving by the thousands that made me go into peace work," Miss Detzer said. "When I was in Vienna, we fed 90,000 children."

"Immediately after the organization of the league in 1915, 1916, Hagen, we sent delegations to 14 countries, warring and neutral, urging a conference of neutral countries with scientific functions to offer continuous mediation," Miss Detzer said. The delegates were received by the prime and foreign ministers, who listened to the idea but felt that the war was too far advanced for scientific methods. I have heard many people say since the war, that the plan was the most intelligent one advanced during the war, and might very probably have worked."

League Of Nations.

Gilbert Murray, the great scholar of England, has called the Women's International League the "great and true league of nations."

"It is because we know what we want," Miss Detzer explained. "We have a definite aim, a warless world, and we are going after it as directly as we know how. We are trying to perform what someone has called woman's primary function, to interpret men to each other. I hope that more women go as delegates to the League of Nations."

Miss Detzer spoke of the International summer school which she attended at Geneva this summer. "Everybody was interested in the same thing, in getting something out of the school to take back to his own country. There wasn't any race or class distinction between the people. All young, all full of great-hearted and unselfish enthusiasm, all with a real goal, they made me realize more than ever that class and race distinctions have dwindled to the point where they are only a matter of thoughts and ideas, not of actuality."

Bill Deterred.

The bill for the conscription of capital and labor, "to take the profit out of war," was derailed by the speaker as simply broadening conscription. A petition signed with 10,000 names was presented to President Coolidge Apr. 27 this year by a delegation of which Jane Addams was the head, urging that universal abolition of conscription and complete world disarmament be placed upon the agenda of the International Disarmament conference. Miss Detzer said, and the petition was put before the delegates by Hugh Gibson.

"During the last six months, two important things have happened to our advantage," she continued. "President Coolidge has declared himself against military training and the war department has decreed that there shall be no bayonet training in the citizens' military training camps. It is amazing that little things, that to us seem quite unimportant, may mean so outsiders. At the International Congress of the League in Ireland this summer, many women in Ireland protested to the cancellation stamp being used on our mail: 'Let's Go—Citizens' Military Training Camp.'"

"How can we hope to accomplish anything toward disarmament when the richest, most powerful and most isolated country in the world advertises its military training even on its mail?" was their plea. They begged us to protest to the government about the practice. And when President Coolidge came out against military training, news of it was sent

MISTAKEN IDENTITY

Village clerk Hazel Lawler has been enjoying a week of "explaining." She agrees that typewriters are sometimes the creators of inaccuracies, as, for instance:

At the village commission meeting Oct. 4, following an agreement to deduct the penalty from Dr. Hugo Erichsen's July tax statement, the clerk wrote the following resolution: "Moved by Commissioner Ladd that the penalty be deducted from his July tax statement." Instead of writing "Dr. Hugo Erichsen's" in place of the possessive pronoun "his," the resolution was made to appear that the penalty was to be deducted from Mr. Ladd's taxes.

"The resolution was corrected at the next commission meeting," said Mrs. Lawler yesterday. "The mistake was entirely my fault at the time the resolution was passed."

SCHOOL ATHLETIC FUND SHOWS AN INCREASE SINCE CLASSES BEGAN

Football is Second in Profit To Motion Pictures Which Leads Financially Among School Activities.

REPORT OF $349 ASSETS MADE

The athletic fund of the Birmingham schools shows an increase of $340.49 from the time classes started in September until Oct. 16, according to a report submitted to members of the school board at their meeting Monday night by Louis M. Randall, business manager.

The bulk of this money was raised by motion pictures, two of which have been shown this fall for the benefit of the fund, the report showed. The first picture was held Sept. 9, and netted $267.36. The second one, Oct. 15, brought in $140.85.

The Ypsilanti football game Friday was the most profitable one so far, bringing in $102.50. The Ford Trade School game was next, with $96 gate receipts, and the Mt. Clemens game third with $60. The Rochester game brought in $15.60.

The addition of $22.12, which was the amount in the fund at the beginning of the semester, brings a total of $381.82 has been paid out.

Blackbird Poor Singer

The binocular survey says that the blackbird which is native to the United States does not have a good song, but is best in March or April, when the bird first comes North. In Europe the name is given to a different bird, the merle, a thrush, which is a fine singer.
