RIRMINGHAM AND A ZONING ORDINANCE

Birmingham's citizens, from now until the special election on October 19, are called upon to scrutinize most carefully a piece of legislation that is destined to have an impressing hearing that carretany a piece of registration line an impressive bearing upon the physical aspects of this community. We refer to the proposed Zoning Ordinance, about which during the past week, a veritable hurricane sentiment has been created, with divided opinion as the natural result.

That such a thing as a Zoning Ordinance would eve be presented for the adoption of this community should not cause any darts of unfair criticism to be directed to-ward any elective body of men who present it to the voters; on the contrary, do we not elect public officials so that we may have a central clearing house for the con-sideration and administration of our collective public needs? It is true, however, that certain legislation proposed for adoption may be erroneous and harmful to the general public; when such a condition arises it is splendid that public opinion be divided, and may the best man win. But all of us, whether for or against this Zoning Ordinance, ought to remember that our interests lie in all of Birmingham, not in any one section.

Birmingham, not in any one section.

However, during the conduct of such a campaign, the average citizen is advised to be careful in forming his final opinion. Much reading material will be forthcoming from both sides. Last week, in an advertisement published in this newspaper, the opposition resorted to a rather scary and alarming kind of propaganda in attacking the propagand Zonber Ordinance. It is to be regardly that they posed Zoning Ordinance. It is to be regretted that they did not use a more dignified type of argument.

As we see it, the proposed Zoning Ordinance prom-

As we see it, the proposed Zohing Ordinance priorises to do much for the general welfare of Birmingham; it has been drafted with the idea of keeping Birmingham a residential community. It contains the same provisions of amendment and penalty that are found within other ordinances now upon the village books. In the last analysis, its actual application and destiny remain entirely within the heard of the nough. tirely within the hands of the people.

It is well for all of us to keep before our eyes the reasons why one person may favor such legislation, and why another may oppose it. Selfishness may be the funda-mental reason for both favorable and unfavorable senti-ment toward it. A person may favor it because, since it does not affect or change his property holdings, he wants protection; another may oppose it because, since it may affect his land values, he seeks protection for his pocket book. Stripped of all its veneer, this Zoning Ordinance, as with many other legislative enactments, is the product of a social attempt to protect material investments. But it is human nature, and worthy of human consideration.

We believe that opposition to any public movement is proper and worthy of the honest respect of even those who think otherwise on the question involved. Opposition to King George's methods of dealing with the Colonies created the United States; opposition to the established order of things has become the vehicle of much of the world's progress. We need opposition, clean, fair opposi-

On the other hand, the adoption of the Zoning Ordinance is claimed by some to be harmful to their property holdings. They oppose it on the grounds that it will de-crease the value of property which they have held for years, hoping that some day it might prove profitable. It is difficult to induce people in this latter dilemma to sup-port a measure which, though promising the greatest good for the greatest number of people in our village, will work an immediate financial hardship upon them. It is hard to ask property owners of this village to support a measure which, though seeking to correct the hit or miss method of platting property here for many years, decreases their

That Birmingham needs a Zoning Ordinance or some similar legislation to protect the single residences of this community is admitted by all—even including those who oppose the proposed draft. Is the text of the Zoning Ordinance to be voted upon October 19 believed to be the correct kind of legislation for the protection of Birmingham The answer to this will be determined after the votes are counted.

In the meantime, let us welcome all the information upon such a problem that we can receive. Let us sift the proposed Zoning Ordinance to the very bottom—but let us do it in the most approved gentlemany fashion. Let us be neighbors trying to solve a common problem.

MORE LOCAL POLICE NEEDED

Reference to the news columns of this paper over a period of weeks reveals the fact that Birmingham citizens are being subjected to a series of uninterrupted burglaries, and that no arrests have been made to aid in stopping the thefts. The reason for this, we believe, lies in the fact that Birmingham's police force is too small in personnel. Most of the local officers are on day duty, leaving but two or three to protect the community at night. Inn't it time that Birmingham's police force kept pace with its physical growth? Many local residents believe we need more policemen on night duty in this village.

"TO BE OR NOT TO BE": 150 FEET WIDE?

A few weeks ago work was started on excavating for a new theater in Birmingham. This project, calling for an expenditure of approximately $400,000.00, was so important that it became necessary for the Briggs Investment Company to determine whether to set the front building line in keeping with a 100-ft. Woodward avenue.

or a 150-ft. Woodward avenue. Finally, however, excava-tion was started on the basis of a 100-ft. Woodward ave-nue, and about seven thousand yards of earth were re-moved, creating the largest job of its kind ever done in

A few days ago the Briggs people were informed that Woodward avenue was to be 150-feet wide, and that all their excavation work was fruitless; then began the retheir excavation work was fruitless; then began the re-filling process, earth being dumped in from excavation work in the rear of the project. Last Friday the work of refilling was stopped; the project held up for another period of time. All of, which is costly to the people who support state government. Isn't this a fair sample of one-man government? How many times has it been dupli-cated in other sections of Michigan in the course of highway construction work?

SENATOR COUZENS TO LIVE IN BLOOMFIELD

James Couzens, U. S. Senator from Michigan, has broken ground for a million dollar home at Wabeek, his large estate in Bloomfield township. We commend the Senator for his good judgment in choosing Bloomfield township as his chief domicile. We also commend the beauty of this same township for having sufficient attraction to bring such a notable character as Mr. Couzens to its hills and lakes. Certainly, we can conceive of no bet-ter place for an energetic U. S. Senator to recuperate from arduous duties in administering to the needs of the world than the locality of Oakland County. We trust that a full year's residence out here will convince the Senator that Uncle Sam should get busy on a plan to smooth out the surface of township roads.

JUST A LITTLE GAS

Now that residents of Southfield township have given the Consumers Power Company a franchise to install gas mains in their territory, we presume that the ancient and honorable institution of the woodpile will vanish from our neighboring community. That is the way of progress. We congratulate Southfield on its farsightedness, however, and hope that it becomes individualistic enough to confine its gasious elements to subterranean pipes as the days go by If it accomplishes this it will, undoubtedly, stamp out a niche most unique in the history of society. For, you will remember, it is artificial gas that we are talking about.
