FLAT CAUSES HILLS DEBATE

Just been completed, he said he built himself a $75,000 home near this development and that other single homes were built there, the multiple dwelling proving no objection.

The Savage development in Bloomfield Hills, he said, would consist of three units, each not larger than a large residence, with the garage underground. Mr. Savage, he said, has an option on 500 adjoining feet for extension of the development.

The multiple residence, Mr. Harris said, would cost about $400,000. It would be two stories high, of an English architecture, with large rooms, the smallest living room being 16 feet by 24 feet.

"No objectionable tenants will live in these apartments," he said. "The rental will be at least $50 a room a month, and the apartments will be seven-room to 14-room apartmensts. We believe every apartment can be leased for two to five years before we start construction."

EXCHANGITES ALLOW SANTA CLAUS RULE

Santa Claus ruled over the destinies of Birmingham Exchanges and their wives Tuesday noon at Northwood Inn, Royal Oak, when about 80 prizes, ranging from a live pig to bath salts, were given to those holding lucky numbers in a game substituted for the usual feather party. A good deal of gaiety followed the raffleing of each prize. More than a dozen turkeys, chickens, and geese, and numerous boxes of candy were taken home by those present. A live Berkshire porker, weighing about 30 pounds, donated by H. T. Ellerby, was won by Guy W. Jensen.
