

Greetings, Graduates!

Because you, as members of the graduating Senior Class of the Baldwin Public High School of Birmingham and vicinity have been steadfast to the principles of higher education, and because of the sacrifice of your parents who have been and always will be your best friends and guides as long as they live, The Eccentric is, indeed, happy to publish this supplement to the regular edition of its newspaper; therefore, to you students, to you parents, and to the faculty of the Baldwin High School, we dedicate this splendidly printed section of this week's Eccentric.

Mindful, too, of the sacrifices which other citizens of this School District make as taxpayers, we cannot pass up the opportunity to congratulate all who have made it possible for Birmingham to enjoy the splendid educational system which is second to none in Michigan.

Without schools none of us would be what we are today. We of the older generation are truly thankful for the educational advantages which we had as children, and as immature youth, because of these advantages we ought to dedicate ourselves to the lending of our support, both moral and financial, to the incessant problem of providing educational facilities for tomorrow's men and women.

That you members of the 1927 Senior Class may live to reap the fruits of your educational investment is the fond hope of a world that is hungering for the wholesome accomplishments you will make in your journey to life's horizon!
