Village Players Elect Officers

And Frolic in Pleasant 'Afterglow'

Members of the Village Players, local amateur dramatic organization, met for their ability to do things quickly and well, and in their playhouse here last Friday evening and after dinner a board of directors for the coming year, staged an "afterglow" which means an ordinary language, a series of rather impromptu acts of actors and the director and officers.

Something more exciting "appeared on the boards" when George M. Dowley, the "comic" of the troupe, was introduced in a suit that appeared to be a cross between a drug store and a bank post, his feet seemed to keep time with the laboring efforts of the Fontaine orchestra that was fixed for the evening.
