SCENE OF PRISONERS' MUTINY

Entrance to coal mine shaft of Kansas State penitentiary, Lansing, Kas., photographed while 228 convicts, in mutiny, were barricaded below. Angered by refusal of permission to have cigars, the convicts took possession of the mine, keeping fourteen guards as prisoners. Inset is of R. H. Hudspeth, acting warden, who fired the first of fourteen bullets sent into the ranks of other prisoners, who rioted within their cells. One guard was stabbed.
