The BIG PARADE

By T. A. G. WEEKLY STORY

This children is another weekly story. It's a very nice story about a big, brown dog. Indeed the big, brown dog was something very fine and perhaps excellent material for the kind of story of which he found himself the subject.

Overwhelming Logic. "Sit, I have no home," began the tramp, "and no home to go to, no rent, no coal bills, to worry over the fire."

"But I am serious. I have no money and no foundation to spend it on."

Blaming It on Eve. "One day," said a boy, "after I had returned with my book on my shoulder from a hard day's labor to his humble abode, Myra it was a humble abode, Young Cain was running about, boy-like, throwing rocks at the birds."

At Smith ever becomes president, he will have overthrown three supposed handicaps, being a Catholic, a wet, and a Democrat.
