Some Quick Uses For Sour Cream

By HANNAH MING

One grand old recipe for sour-cream cakes, gingerbread and cookies made from sour cream, but one who buys sour cream in half-pint bottles and seldom takes cognate to a minor tragedy when the cream sours. For these are the half-pint bottles of sour cream which are too precious to throw away, but too precious to use for anything but the most delicate in baking, certain salad dressings and sauces give a twentieth-century product quite as delicate as the totally different, than those which made the reputation of good cream a generation or two ago.

A sharp sauce of sour cream and horseradish is excellent with certain meat and vegetables, particularly with ham or roast beef if cut into one of the cabbage family accompanies the meat. A quick and easy recipe which may be halved or quartered to suit the size of the family and the amount of cream available is herewith submitted:

Mix together a half cup grated horseradish (fresh or canned), with a half cup sour cream, half teaspoon salt and one teaspoon sugar.

A beautiful salad dressing is in fact better if it is made of sour cream. For instance, this:

Mix one teaspoon mustard, one teaspoon salt, a dash of cayenne, one cup or half-tablespoon of flour, one cup of tobacco sauce, a teaspoon of sugar and two tablespoons of milk if necessary to give the desired quantity. Place in a double boiler over hot water and cook for 10 minutes until well thickened and smooth. Remove from fire, cool and stir in two tablespoons vinegar, adding it slowly and beating well.

An unexpected cream dressing for crisp shredded cabbage, romaine or head lettuce is made thus:

Whip one cup of sour cream until stiff. Add one tablespoon salt, two tablespoons lemon juice, a generous dash of paprika, few drops of tobacco sauce, a teaspoon of sugar and two tablespoons of finely chopped green pepper. Beat well and add a tablespoon of chicken and one or two finely chopped hard-boiled eggs. Chiff before serving.

Finely shaved cabbage may be served hot if well seasoned with salt, pepper and heated just to the boiling point of sour cream.

Steamed cabbage is delicious served with a sour cream dressing.

Shred the cabbage finely and steam until tender. Season with salt, pepper and butter and pour the hot dressing over it. The recipe below makes enough dressing for half or a small head of cabbage.

Mix together one egg (well beaten), one-half cup sour cream, one-half tablespoon butter, one-half tablespoon vinegar, one-half tablespoon lemon juice, one-half teaspoon salt, one-half teaspoon sugar, a dash of pepper, paprika, powdered mustard, celery seed and two tablespoons of finely chopped canned pimiento. Heat until thickened and pour over cabbage.

Sour cream can always be added to any form of shredded steak or pot roast to good advantage and if you long for a mushroom sauce, your opportunity has arrived when the cream sours, for acid cream is quite as good as sweet, if not better.

It Is Not So Much What You Wear as How You Wear It

It is not so much matter what you wear as how you wear it that gives it class. Take scarfs for instance. Jane Winton (left) wears hers tied in a huge floppy bow under her chin. On the other hand, if the party frock (center) is not worn with an air it may be a "flop." Padded pink tulle trimmed with blue forget-me-nots and blue ribbon at the waistline are the ingredients. The older woman who keeps her youthful form could hardly help looking distinguished in the straight-line gown of pale green georgette crepe (right) with long waistline. The entire skirt is covered with long fringe and the shawl that is worn with the gown has a fringe border as long as the skirt fringe.

Nightly Care of the Skin

By LUCREZIA BOHI

To subdue laughing lines in the face is not such a task as some folks would have us believe. I do not think these lines should be eliminated altogether for they serve us well to tell the story of the happy disposition of their owner. And who but a confirmed cynic would want to efface all trace of such a delightful characteristic?

But even a happy disposition can take the toll of physical beauty if the individual doesn't take a little care to nourish and stimulate the muscles and tissues. He as merry as you may, then, at night just before retiring, or some time just long enough to take the simple treatment I'm going to outline for you. By doing this your laughing lines always will be just a simple reminder of your sunny temperament, and they never will grow into deep furrows.

First, you will need a good rich cream to rub on the face as a night cream. The cream that you use should be rich because of the increased activities. The cream should also be a little thick so that it will stay on the skin so that the delicate tissues are not irritated by the massage movement.

On the fingers push into the tissue under the creases, then, beginning at the base of the nostrils, push the fingers upward and outward toward the temples and be sure to keep below the hollow of the eye, and carrying the line down to the hair line. Use the first, second and third fingers and press them firmly, but gently, against the forehead from the hair line to the forehead and back down to the hair line. Repeat this movement 15 times. Never massage the face with a downward movement, as this tends to drop as one grows older, and the purpose of massage is to increase and firm them so that they become taut and can hold the face up, instead of allowing it to sag.

Between the ages of 18 and 30 I would suggest that this treatment be taken every other night. After the age of 30 it should be taken each night.

Beauty Reigns At 100th Mardi Gras

Miss Mildred Brown, above, daughter of the late Perry Brown, patron king of the south, is the Queen of the New Orleans Mardi Gras for 1927. The celebration this year marks the one-hundredth anniversary of the formal celebration of the carnival in the southern city. Miss Brown is among the season's debutantes in New Orleans.

SEEN ON FIFTH AVENUE

Head-dresses for evening wear include thinness, semi-transparent caps of tulle, narrow tulle and bands of brilliant and other jewels. It is to go with.

Slippers dyed to match the frock are much seen for evening wear. Sometimes the slippers are made of a different material than the frock. Present prophesies are to the effect that taffeta will be used extensively for wraps, coats and dresses early next summer. Both plain and flowered treatments will be included.

Unborn calf is used as a medium for trimming hats and coats, to say nothing of shoes, pocket-books and buttonholes.

The latest beach pajamas are made with printed silk top, draped and gathered and completed by taffeta trousers.

With the Women of Today

By Mrs. Lillian Campbell

That children with defective vision have a normal education, the National Committee for the Prevention of Blindness is seeking. Mrs. Winifred Hathaway, associate director, to visit 10 states—a 9,000 mile trip.

Stated Legions of Women Voters in 45 states are pressing what they term the "Big Three" in the majority of legislative programs. The measure is an provision for the direct primary system of nominating candidates, given jury service and immediate state appropriations to match federal funds for maternity and nursing work.

Woman Doctor Honored. Dr. Helen Taylor, specialist in pediatrics at Columbia Hospital, was recently received into the American College of Physicians at its recent convocation in Cleveland, O. Only a few women have been admitted to the college. Dr. Taylor-Jones was graduated from Wellesley college and Johns Hopkins university.

Fears Buds. Ethel Hawkins, of Indianapolis, is one of the world's few women steelworkers. She is tall, nervous about swinging an all-confounding 175 foot above the street level, painting a giant stack, but says in a few weeks she will be admitted to her husband's life-size job, helping him in his work and when he died, suddenly she took over his job.

Likes Hair Bobbed. When Mrs. Cecil had Mrs. Margaret Bloom of Amherst, near Mendota, Ill., was asked if she liked her newly bobbed hair, she answered that her only regret was that she had wanted so long to have it done.

Organizing Sight Saving Classes. That children with seriously defective vision—as such are often educated as totally blind—may have normal education.

Mrs. Hathaway will also visit the communities where such sight saving classes are already organized and make a nationwide study of their methods and accomplishments. She recently completed a study of sight saving classes in England.

"There are approximately 264 sight saving classes in the United States today," says Mrs. Lewis H. Carr, managing director of the committee. "There should be at least 5,000."

Mrs. Hathaway is considered the
