Pillows Made From Scraps of Cloth

By GLADYS H. BEVANS

Don't treat it with contempt and throw it away—no matter how small it may seem. For according to present standards and styles it will surely make a pillow. And the making of these small new pillows brings a pleasant variation on the usual summer sewing and embroidery and fancy work in general.

Not that what you can be as original as you please—but in case you are utterly at sea as to how these little pillows are connected, it would be a great help to you to look them over in the decorating places, the department store or the small shops. When you have done so you will see that a little piece of brocade, a square from an old quilt, or a scrap of the new quilting, a piece of real patchwork, an oblong of satin—nothing is too small or too inconspicuous to make a pillow. And these pillows are highly specialized, as you might say—head pillows and almost shoulder blade pillows.

To show how anything at all is being used, one pillow seen was about nine inches square and was made of small squares of two materials, the lovely Turkey red and faded blue and white checkedingham. Another was a very

LEMON KEEPS HAIR BLONDE

By Josephine Huddleston

Keeping blond hair light is a constant battle against nature. Usually blond hair, having survived the childhood period of changing color, doesn't begin to turn darker until the early twenties.

If the turning darker is checked at this time, it won't be necessary to ever resort to costly bleaching of the hair, except in unusual cases. However, once the hair turns darker, the lemon shampoo won't avail much except after continued use for some time.

To make this delightful shampoo add one bar of finely shaved lemon soap and a pinch of borax to one pint of cold water. Set this over a slow fire and allow it to simmer until the soap has entirely dissolved. It is then ready to remove. Strain and set aside to cool and jelly. When the liquid turns into jelly it is ready to use.

To the amount of lemon shampoo jelly used for one shampoo which is usually half the amount made by the above proportions, add the white of one egg that has been beaten until it is so stiff that it will stand alone. Mix the beaten egg-white lightly through the lemon jelly then apply it to the hair and use as you would any shampoo soap.

When the hair has been thoroughly cleaned, rinse the hair through several clear waters and finish off with the lemon rinse. This is made by adding the strained juice of two lemons to one-half pint of cold water. Pour the lemon water over the hair and allow it to dry on.

When the hair is dry it will be soft and fluffy and filled with golden lights that will be the envy of all your friends. Used once each week it should keep your hair the pure blond color so desirable. If the hair has already started to turn darker the shampoo won't show very decided results until after the fifth or sixth shampoo. However, used once each week it should show results by that time.

fancily-quilted unleached muslin the quilting done by hand. Another one was very small and round, with a piece of raffie around its entire circumference—very gay and feminine looking for a boudoir. The tri-cornered ones are not so new, but many variations of the star design are being used. One especially quaint is a seven-pointed star of one colored material applied on a foundation of another color.

Black Dinner Gown

Black chifon fashions the dinner gown pictured. It employs a three-tiered skirt and full sleeves with an accenting flower of flesh on shoulder and waist. Worn by Maricette Miller.

Fashions And Fads

By MILDRED ASH

The Louis-Cuban heel, which combines the height of the French monarchical period with the slender lines of the Cuban underpinning, is becoming increasingly popular, especially for evening wear. It adapts itself excellently to the short vamp shoe and is equally at home under those of longer vamp, which after all cover the majority of American feet.

Seemingly specially sporty, some of the newest kid oxford shoes have their front section scanned on a curved line that tapers upward toward the arch of the foot. These stunning two-eyelot shoes have their upper edge cut low enough to gracefully curve below the ankle and have high, slender heels to impart additional daintiness and grace.

The New Way of Cooking

Since the long ago days of Eve, the lot of woman has been to wearily bend over a hot fire and cook for a hungry, and sometimes unreasonable, man—until today.

The modern homekeeper does not need fire in her kitchen. She is spared the discomfort, the labor, the constant watchfulness, of old-time cooking.

The woman who has an Electric Range needs only to prepare the food, put it in the oven, set the time clock, touch a switch—and forget the kitchen until meal time. The operation of the Electric Range is automatic; its cooking is perfect.
