The Other Chap Says Something

THREE BLIND MICE
Monticello, Nothing and Lova are due for a fall. These three jokers from the East Side reputationally speaking have featured the literary, artistic, and dramatic world of Monticello for some time. They are headed for a fall for being Waterbury and other Chicago editors through their own fault.

Their "biggest" piece, "Lova," has been a long time in the making, and they have already received a few stinging rebuffs and letters from the Monticello editor.

It is more than that they are coming out of their careers, but they are not to be discouraged. They are now working on their next piece, "The Mystery of the Waterbury," which they expect to publish in the near future.

And his fellow hally-bones of the Monticello school of criticism, H. L. Menden, is leaving the staff of the Mount of Innocence, with his adventuresome attitude.

We Believe This Is a Record!

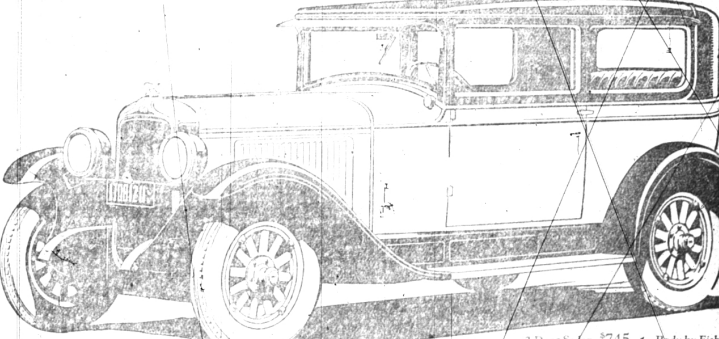

ONE day last week we rebuilt eleven pairs of shoes for the same family. It's not often, in fact—we think this is a record to receive eleven pairs of shoes from the same family, all at the same time.

How many pairs of half-worn shoes are there at your doorstep? Be thrifty—have those old shoes rebuilt. You'll be pleased when you see them with new soles and heels. When you'll find our charges very moderate.
