

GRAND TRUNK

More Injunctions Served At Instance Of Land Owners

Advancement on the new Grand Trunk Railway grade east of Birmingham is one more held up through an injunction which is in force today. A temporary writ of injunction was served at 3 p. m. today by Chief Justice Walter James Anderson on Roy Carter, construction superintendent for the Grand Trunk following the granting of the plea. Friday, Judge Dwight H. Merriman in the Wayne county circuit court issued an order requiring Judge Ferrario to show cause for his writ of prohibition. The state's order destroys the effectiveness of his injunction which prevents further work on the right of way through the affected property. In the event the writ is expected to make final decision as to whether Wayne County's order shall be set aside.

The plaintiffs are land owners in the vicinity of the new right of way. They are Ralph J. Peckham, of Bloomfield Estates, Eleanor L. Hutzel, Troutbridge Farms and Margarette West, of Birmingham Gardens. The writ is effective as a deterrent to the other side of the work, but the part of it being done in these three subdivisions. A hearing is set for ten days after the serving of the document.

Workers idle
Meanwhile more than 200 men, laborers for the National Steel company, are idle and face chances of a forced vacation. There is still continuing in the unaffected districts. The jurisdiction of the Wayne County court in the case is doubted considerably as a question in question is in Oakland County in the instance of the State Highway commission and the Grand Trunk are ordered to show cause why they should be permanently restrained from construction.

The most recent petitions are similar to those registered in the Oakland County circuit court. In the case of the Wayne County circuit court where the state was made responsible. This latest in the series follows the precedent of the evicting of Robert Rose who parked his automobile house on the sidewalk. The state was made responsible for his land, in Birmingham Gardens.

Job Slowed Up
The large amount of litigation coming to the state is blamed by R. N. Sanson, general superintendent, in explaining that, as rapidly as possible, as specified in the contract. Numerous injunctions, he says, have stalled progress and no definite date of the cost estimate for the project are not known. The cost which was approximated by former Gov. Clegg is $1,177,000.

WORK UNDER WAY ON PAVING OF NEW ROAD IN COUNTY

Healy Construction Company Successful Bidders in $228,000 Project

Work is under way today on the paving of the west Maple road from the Orchard Lake to the Walnut Lake roads, west of Birmingham, following the award of contracts Tuesday by the county road commission to a Healy Construction company. The cost will be $228,000. The pavement will extend for six miles and it is estimated that three miles will be completed this week. It is to be 36 feet wide. The pavement is to be concrete and will be 20 feet wide. The sides of the road will be of gravel. Other bidders on the job were: The Taylor Construction company of Birmingham; Bartling & Dull; Mark Hanna; and the Handyside company.

POSTMEN WORK DESPITE HEAT; SUGGEST AIDS

"Is it hot? Well, you just try it." Amid summer days when old Sol beats mercilessly down on the streets of Birmingham and heat waves shimmer in the dazzling light—when the more fortunate of the village's 12,000 souls may seek the cooler shade of their homes or offices, there is still a little group who toil and tramp weary miles to serve the public.

They are seven of them, and the above phrase speaks with an absolute truth. Yes, it is hot—but they keep on working through their efforts every Birmingham home has mail at its door twice daily. On Saturdays, when no delivery is made and excluding most of the holidays, you have guessed it, so are fifteen, and other individuals who will make individual to the county's honor roll of working heroes.

Whether the postmen hovers near zero mark or rises to 100, they deliver their mail, and walk from 18 to 18 miles each day. Most of the routes are over seven miles long, the mail carriers. "Do you meet with any inconveniences in making deliveries at each house?" This question brings to the fore a host of interesting stories with one another to prove that their route offers more hazards than that.

Many Birmingham Folk Among 125,000 At Opening

Thousands of Birmingham residents gathered for the 125,000 persons who swarmed Sunday to the new Detroit Zoo at Woodward avenue and the Ten Mile road for the opening and today hundreds of others continue along the road from Birmingham to the new park to give it an inspection.

The record crowd of Sunday was handled without a serious mishap. This, despite the fact that members of the crowd broke down the fence of the new zoo at the Ten Mile road, and that about 20,000 persons entered through this means. The official count through the gates was 102,482, according to Director John McElroy.

Wardway avenue, throughout Sunday and even long hours past the official closing time of the zoo, was a scene of wild confusion. Traffic was handled by officers from Detroit and from the companies near the zoo.

The bears, elephants and lions proved the greatest attraction of the day, all going through the zoo. "We need a new animal park, a warehouse and a garage." He pointed out to the commission that the regular meeting of the building. Commissioner Hulbert asked Mr. Barry to present tonight at the regular meeting on a future date for study.
