FASHION CONCENTRATES ON KNITTED FROCKS FOR ONLOOKERS

By MADELON

New York Observer for Central Press and The Eccentric New York.—The resort mode arrives in a triumph of color, with rippled stripes and mixture of effects.

Smart styles for the resort season and early spring are here. They bring a new color luxury that belongs to the sunny days and colorful settings for which they were designed. The coming mode, as illustrated here, reflects the smartest styles accepted by Paris and now being worn at Biarritz. They are the mode at its best, with all the charm and youthfulness that could be desired.

Never has fashion met the needs of the sportswoman so attractively, and never have spectator costumes offered such a smart argument in favor of looking on at the sport.

The sleeveless frock is of special interest for active sports, as also is the long-sleeve model illustrated, for those who prefer not Topping the mode of smart girl costumes is this two-piece frock, left, in Fifth avenue's favorite sports mixture of color, which bespeaks its ultra good taste for the active golfer who does not want to tan, and its flat applied stripes are a token of its modern styling, especially good in soft Kashmir jersey.

Rippled stripes have won their way to exceptional success, and in the slender model of "total indistinctness" centers a world of many of the smartest spots in Palm Beach! Besides its lack of sleeves, there is real style importance in its three-quarter tunic, which makes the pleated skirt look

When Law And Education Meet

CLARA LEEDS

Baltimore, Md., Dec. 4.—Brushing a timeworn egg from his right eye, the policeman, who was at least six and a half feet tall and had a hand like a flat-iron, picked up a certain young person, reverse side sky-most, and observed: "Young man, I'll give you the worst paddling—"

He ceased, he gasped, he stood in amaze. "Say," said he, "ain't you a girl?"

And so she was. She was a girl, incredible as it may seem, for all around her for leagues and leagues were nothing but boys and policemen, and noise, and time-worn eggs, and vegetables in a state of marked dilapidation.

This is just a part of what happened when the students of Baltimore Polytechnic institute and City college—two institutions for youngsters of high school age here—went about their pleasant annual custom of starting their yearly football game 24 hours before the players appeared upon the field.

Fighting for 40 Years Now, then, argued the students, this is a matter of tradition. We have been doing it for 40 years, and the whole police department shan't stop us this time.

Perfectly true. City and Poly have played a game every year for 40 years, and when you maul each other once a year for 40 years you are bound to get to the place where your interest amounts to negligible endeavor.

The results of all this aren't yet fully determined, but the following was the status of affairs on the following day:

One girl, perhaps modernity's most confirmed tomboy, at home under her angry father's watchful eye; name, Clara Leeds, aged 15, apparatus, boy's sideline sweater and a boy's cap. Forty-two students arrested. Five under medical care. One police sergeant nursing an injured head. Seventy-nine black eyes.

Clara, the tomboy, goes limping about her angry father's watchful eye; she goes out as a Molly Pitcher she will take her shin guards.

How It Happened: It happened this way: Clara has a boy friend in City college, named John, and John has a five-year-old car. When John drove his five-year-old car in the parade on the night before the game, Clara rode in the back seat as a boy—an unprecedented thing, for this 40-year feud is supposed to be strictly a stag affair.

In a suburban bank in Chicago a mouse nest made of $250 bills was found.

A little boy who wandered into the line of traffic came out unconscious, the police reported. Four students had to have wounds sewed up. Five were charged at the police station with disorderly conduct. Fences were destroyed and other property damaged. Bricks littered the scene of the melee.

The police telephones were busy with calls from residents, but the sergeant had a ready explanation. "Now, don't worry," he exclaimed. "It's just our educational institutions demonstrating."

Celery Stuffing

Mix together three cups stale bread crumbs, one-half cup butter, pepper and salt, two teaspoons celery salt, and two cups chopped celery. Pour one cup hot milk over all and let stand 30 minutes. Drain off all milk. Fill cavity in fowl with mixture, sew up and roast as usual.
