

The NEW Maytag Washer

Offers an Advanced Method of Soap and Water Removal

PERFECT Wringing! Water and soap removed even from bunched blankets and lumpy overalls from any garment no matter how unevenly fed to the rollers. Automatic adjustment to all thicknesses and shapes, to every fold, seam and crevice.

Water and soap squeezed completely from the thinnest silk handkerchief, yet buttons and ornaments passed without crushing! Clothes fed instantly into the roller by a new automatic safety feed. Such is the New Maytag Roller Water Remover.

This advanced water and soap removing device is exclusively owned and controlled by The Maytag Company and is obtainable only as a part of the NEW Maytag Washer.

See the New Maytag now on display at your dealer's store. Ask the Maytag dealer to show you how simple to use, quick and convenient this new washer is, how superior to anything you have ever used before.

(Continued from Page 1) through the process of evolutionary thought, has advanced from the dark regions of ignorance and superstition, the man has found through the centuries has experimented with many things, has discarded or at least considered the instinct of the beast in his affairs, and that a partial civilization is the product.

Sobriety the Ideal

"Drunkenness, whether it be partial intoxication or complete unconsciousness, is harmful to the good and proper progress of society," said Mr. Averill. "Sobriety, we all concede, is an ideal condition in which man will progress more rapidly to peace, health, and prosperity. It is, therefore, placed upon a country's statutes for the guidance of persons who are unable to make their own will do the prohibiting, stands for a greater degree of sobriety in the masses, then it is a good ally for the human race. Christianity came upon this earth 1900 years ago—not too soon for the spirit of mankind. The same logic applies to prohibition, or any other measure necessary to help the race of men and women, boys and girls. Prohibition will never succeed completely in this general sense, and it ought to remain in our law for the benefit of posterity."

Charles S. Kinnison, of Hawthorne Electric Co., a Detroit newspaper, took as his subject on the program, "The Eighteenth Amendment and the Community." He stated that he was not rabid either way on the question but that had prohibition done nothing more for the country than to abolish the old saloon, it has justified its existence.

"The prohibition law in the United States is illustrative of the frantic outstretching of the hands of a people toward idealism," said Mr. Kinnison. "In these days of the illegal use of liquor, I wonder just what people think about when they take a drink—even a tiny drink of wine. Do they see the sly movements, the squalor, the darkness of smugglers from the Canadian border? Do they see the small motor boat at the wharf across the river? Do they visualize the perversion of law when the police officer exchanges the average drinker, when he pays for his liquor, actually states that the actual constitutes the bribery of our law enforcing agencies? If people visualize this process, they would be more law-abiding."

The Law and the Church
Rev. Henry S. Evans, pastor of the United Presbyterian Church, discussed "The Eighteenth Amendment and the Church." He said, in part:

"To say that the church is in favor of prohibition is standing rather mildly a fact which even a blind man ought to be able to see. Legislative prohibition was brought about by and through the church, functioning thru the anti-saloon league and similar organizations. The church stands irrevocably committed to the principles involved in the 18th Amendment. But the American church, like the nation, has been afflicted with the idea that a law is a panacea, a cure-all for every ill, so that many of us felt that the matter of prohibition was finally and definitely settled with the passing of this law. The last five years has furnished ample evidence that such an assurance was entirely unfounded. Prohibition is not an accomplishment but an unfinished task, and until the church is awake to that fact, it will remain an unfinished task. "Now, the U. S. has legislative prohibition. The laws already of our statute books in support of the amendment are most of them good and in many cases sufficient. The enemies of prohibition realize that their one hope of defeating the cause is in the indifference of the people who have placed laws on the statute books. If public sentiment does not support the law it will fall into disrepute, and finally into disuse, until we shall be placed in the impossible position of a nation which is legally dry, and actually wet. This will eventually mean the return of the liquor traffic. Legal prohibition advanced from a fond dream to an accomplished fact thru the medium of education: It was line upon line and precept upon precept in the school, the church, the lecture platform, the religious and secular press, until the public mind which has an almost unlimited capacity for resisting information, began to accept the idea, and the amendment to the constitution cannot be only as the natural but inevitable result."

Must Train Young

"Actual prohibition must travel the same road. We have a rising generation which must be trained to realize the moral, economic and sociological folly of the use of alcoholic liquor as a beverage. It must be taught that prohibition is both just and advantageous. It must learn that the law must be both observed and enforced. We have an alien population whose people are not our people and whose ideals are not our ideals. They must be Americanized so thoroughly that instead of imposing their ideas and customs on us, they will accept prohibition as they accept the other looms which America affords. We have un-American citizens who have been born in this country, into whose being there must be instilled respect for the laws of the land which gave them birth. Let the church teach them obedience, both by example and precept."

"And then there is a considerable minority of our people who do not and never have believed in prohibition, either in principle or practice. It is not sufficient that they be restrained either by fear or respect for law. With the evidence so overwhelmingly upon the side of prohibition, it should be possible to bring them to see the error of their ways. This may mean constant reiteration of truths which we have so long accepted that they have become trite and tiresome to us. But many of them have become trite because they are true.

"There are several strong agencies which we would have to oppose if we were to teach the principles of obedience. In the movies, for instance, the representatives of the law are habitually at a disadvantage. The judge, the policeman, the detective fare badly in the average plot. On the other hand, murderers are made attractive, robbers are pictured as high-minded and gentlemanly, crooks are made to appear noble and honorable, and a glamor of romance and red-blooded adventure is thrown around every form of lawlessness. The newspapers are also contributing to this condition by means of their lurid recitals of crime, in which no morbid or filthy detail is ever omitted. The church has often been accused of sentimentality. But after watching these weather-vanes which show the way the wind is blowing in public opinion, the movies and the newspapers, one suspects that in the matter of sentimentality the church has not been the greatest offender. For to anyone with the least discernment it is clear that outside the church we are having a real debauch of public sentimentality, an expressing itself in a silly exaltation of crime, and lawlessness."

"Teach the principles of obedience in the church, the home, the school, and thru our papers, rigorous and secular. It is probably too much to expect of the movies. Once get our people to respect authority and obey our laws, and the 18th amendment will take the best discernment it is clear that the church has emphasized every conceivable aspect of God, except this: that whatever else God means he certainly represents moral order. Christ is no friend of the undisciplined and lawless. Obedience was the core of his character. "Thy will be done, as in heaven so on earth," I came down from heaven not to do my own will but the will of him that sent me. "Not my will, but thine be done." Like the Mississippi River, our wave of lawlessness cannot be stopped in its flood stage, it must be checked in the smaller streams of childhood. Nothing is closer to the real task of the church than this."

Former A. A. U. W. Back Tuesday

Palmer School and in the afternoon, Mrs. Edward G. Wasey of Harmon avenue will entertain in her honor at a bridge luncheon.

One of the most important meetings in which Dr. James will participate will be at the Baldwin Library next Thursday at 4 p. m. when she will talk on the "School and the Library." Dr. James is an expert on questions pertaining to libraries. Her doctor's treatise, which she obtained from Brown University, was study of the various leading libraries of the country.

On Friday afternoon, Mrs. Fred D. Farar of Brown street will entertain at tea in honor of the guests.

The climax of the social functions given will be the A. A. U. W. Luncheon at the Fox and Hounds Inn Saturday honoring the Senior High School girls. Blue and yellow, the class colors, will be used for decorations and will be repeated in the unusual tiny diplomas used as place cards.

Out-of-town guests at the luncheon will be Mrs. M. B. Joseph of Saginaw, state vice-president of the A. A. U. W., Mrs. Joseph Keal of Detroit, state president, and Mrs. Fandra Crocker of Ann Arbor.

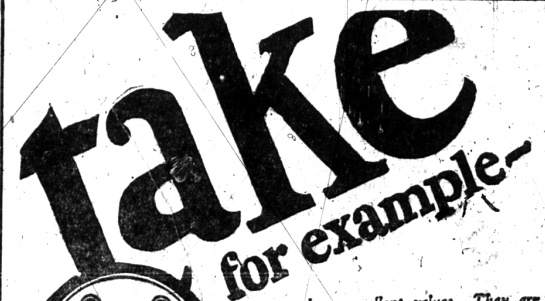

Mrs. Harrison J. Stringham of Grand avenue has charge of the luncheon. She will be assisted by Mrs. Clarence Muet of Brown street, Mrs. Wasey, Mrs. R. C. Dwyer of Riverchase, Mrs. Harvey F. Cornwell of Linden road and Mrs. David Ladd of Macklark Avenue.
