RELAY DECIDES TRACK MEET

Schools shared the major points in the relay during the selection of champions. Wandaite won the relay and the meet by amassing 31 points, incidentally breaking Morrow's six year monopoly in S. E. A. Championships. Mt. Clemens lined up in second place with 29 points and Birmingham was third with 25 1/2 units. The Baldwinites took second in the relay, a first would have meant the winning of the meet.

The results of Saturday's meet closely resembles the finish of the tourney last year, when the relay also decided the event. Ferndale and Monroe tied for first and Birmingham was two-points behind, and as this year, finishing in second place in the relay.

Five records were bettered on the Ypsilanti College field. Joyce McCalla broke the previous mark in the discus throw, by heaving the platter 123 feet 4 inches. McCalla was also high point man of the meet totaling 11 points, with second in the 100 and 220 yard dashes and the first in the discus throw. Roderick Cox of Birmingham was the runnerup in points with 19 1/2. He added his total by winning the shot put, tying for second in the high jump, placing third in the discus throw and gaining a fourth in the half mile run.

Other marks that were bettered were in the high jump with Jerry Rekin of Ft. Huron topping the bar at 5 feet 9 1/8 inches, in the pole vault when James Snyder of Monroe vaulted 11 feet, in the broad jump where Harold Zeigler leaped 21 feet 4 inches, and in the javelin throw with another Mt. Clemens man, Ed Smith, hurling the javelin 163 feet 7 inches.

Records were also made in the 100 and 220 yard dashes and in the high and low hurdles but they were not recognized because of a strong wind down the cinder path. Milton Thomson romped away with the first in the low sticks in the record time of 26.8, but the mark was not allowed.

Cox and Thomson were the only Maroon tracksters to gain first places. Berger placed second in the pole vault and might have accomplished more had his pole not broken on his final jumping, giving him a nasty fall.

I. S. BROWN AS CLOCK CITY

New York is, if any city may be so called, a City of Clocks, and the clock to be placed on the north facade of the new New York Central Building in Park Avenue, sixty feet above the ground is described by the architect as "one of the most capricious sculptural decorations ever proposed for the city."

The dial is to be about thirteen feet in diameter. It is to be supported by two symbolic figures, "Transportation" on the one side, "Industry" on the other.

On the island a few miles from the city, the clock will look on its larger, younger sister with the scorn of the seasoned campaigner for the tax recruit. It will ring out regularly day in and day out to tell the time to those whose offices are in the Wall Street section. To the old tower of Trinity Church, the eyes of thousands turn every day. The runner, the broker, the customer—all look at it as they leave the office for Broadway and take note of the time.

Across the bay the Borough Hall clock in Richmond tells Staten Island and the time-telling tower in the borough clock has a reputation for faithfulness. Contrarily, the timepiece in the town of Astoria, Oregon's Borough President's office once was known for its periodic eccentricities. A Around Court Street now they say that the clock has magnified its ways and keeps good time.

One of the conspicuous clocks in Queens is in the Bank of Manhattan Building. A high distance away on the top of the Brewer's Rolls-Royce plant there rests a clock that can be seen by commuters on the rapid transit systems from Astoria, Flushing and Corona to Manhattan. The clock has been a landmark since the Queensboro Bridge opened up.

In Manhattan both the city and the Municipal Building clocks have attracted much attention in their days of service. The City Hall was gutted by fire several years ago, but its clock never stopped.

The clock that knows most of the Municipal Building's history lies forgotten in a city junkroom while a new and vibration-proof clock is being made. The hours on the arch between the buildings wings. The change was effected last January, after ten years of severe, traffic vibrations put an end to an honorable career and the first clock was replaced without ceremony. With the same lack of ceremony the new clock picked up the tick and begun its run.

A Newcomer Uptown

The Metropolitan Life Insurance Building change an heard for blocks around through the roar of traffic and the clatter of building construction. Though it is in Madison Square, children sledding in Jackson Heights, Queens, know when to go home at night by the clock's face. The clock is a quarter-hours flashed out by red and white lights that illuminate its face.

Further uptown, in the center of the city is called "New York by Night," is a newcomer among large timepieces. Extra attention has been attracted to the Paramount Building clock in Times Square by the dangerous repair job that has been done on its face—of one of its faces, the one looking down on Broadway. When the dials are alight at night they may be seen in Queens, the suburbs and on the harbor.

Across town from the Paramount the Grand Central Terminal offers a group of clocks. Perhaps the best-known member of this group is the square clock that sits jauntily above the information booth on the upper level. The Pennsylvania Station offers much the same group as offers much the same group as the Grand Central. Rowanstairs below or later the New York Island Railroad's waiting rooms repeat.
