

"There's a Touch of Rural England In the Charm of Bloomfield Hills"

Squirrel Road, where it passes the wooded western boundary of Lakewood. This picturesque rolling land at Adams and Long Lake Roads has been divided by the Judson Bradway Company into small estates of one to three acres.

Framed in a picturesque setting of woods, brooks and verdant hills is the Bloomfield Hills School for Children (below)—only one of several schools in the district. It lies just east of a rolling, wooded Judson Bradway development... Chelmsleigh, with estates that average over two acres.

On the crest of a hill, surrounded by broad lawns, this residence in Bloomfield Estates. It is offered for sale by the Judson Bradway Company. For information phone Birmingham 38.

On request... the "Book of the Bloomfield Trail." Profusely illustrated, describing the unusual features of Bloomfield Hills. Driving directions for a delightful motor-trip through this region of forests, lakes and hills! For a copy—call Randolph 9700, or write Judson Bradway Company, 527 Majestic Building.

Typically English with its protection of great elms is this home in Bloomfield Village, just west of Birmingham along West Maple Road. Here homesites of generous proportions, and attractive residences (including the above) are offered at surprisingly low figures by the Judson Bradway Company, 315 So. Woodward Ave., Birmingham.