Police aid was sought today by L. Hamlet, Shakespearean actor, in the recovery of a ladder boomed to a neighbor late last week. The name of the neighbor is not known. (When we say "police" we mean the sheriff, because there are no police.)

Pretty Lena Glue was sought today by relatives who feared she was kidnapped from her home at 111 First Street.

Lena, who is 18 years old, was last seen with an aged gentleman to buy groceries and was last seen in Pontiac until she could be found.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY

The Eccentric today is three years old. Quite a fellow at it. It is well and wishes you well. How are you?

HAPPY BIRTHDAY

In our birthday celebration this year, we wish to offer a magnificent prospectus. It will be one large birthday cake with a special ice-cream for all to enjoy.

The Eccentric celebrates its birthday today. May 17, 1928, it is announced by the publishers, George H. Mitchell and C. W. Whitehead.

Since the paper was started, interest in the paper has increased. Starting with only one subscriber, the publisher's today has increased to include members of the neighborhood, families, and friends.

The city of Birmingham residents, with being too small to be practical, have another news coming.

John Blah, Southfield Township farmer, today announced plans for the construction of a large barn in the vicinity of the south end of town. The barn is to be used for the storage of hay.

With an exterior of red brick, the structure is expected to offer a magnificent prospectus. It will be one large-story house with a special ice-cream for all to enjoy.

"I believe in the future of Southfield and although I realize I am building for the future more than for today, it is because I have faith in the future and the future of America," he said.

Part of the barn will be rented and Blah will use the remaining space for storing his own hay, he declared.

The page that you find is published by the publishers, George H. Mitchell and C. W. Whitehead.

You might also add that I could not use a slab of bacon from the certain family at the north whose ham is filled but who has neglected to pay for the paper for two years.

GOT ANY RAGS TO SELL?

"Silly question, isn't it? But look, if you have some things to sell whether it be a broken bottle or last year's school cloth. ECCENTRIC CLASSIFIEDS WILL DO IT
