SEA DISASTER HERO, SURVIVORS

Captain Schuyler Cummings, of the S. S. American Shipper, one of the first ships to reach the spot where the ill-fated liner Vestris went down 300 miles off the Virginia capes, and three of the survivors picked up by his ship. Left, Captain Cummings; right, Mrs. Earl Devore, wife of the auto racer who lost his life in the disaster, with her dog, "Speedway Lady," on arrival in New York; and, below, Paul Danna, passenger, and Clara Ball, stewardess, who spent 22½ hours in the water before being rescued.

GREAT ENDS FEW THIS GRID SEASON AS GAMES PLAYED TO DATE INDICATE

By BILL RITT
Sports Writer for Central Press and The Eccentric

Fine ends are few and far between this football season, if games played to date can be judged as adequate tests.

From the University of Maine to Southern California there roam no Benny Oosterbaans, no Vic Hansons, no Fishwicks and no Thayers.

However, while there are no great outstanding wingmen who have made their appearances to date 1928 has seen a host of fine ends in action.

First to mind comes Dick Abernathy, of Vanderbilt, who has shown some of the qualities that made Lynn Momar and Hok Wakefield great stars.

Then there are Honey Guarino, of Pittsburgh, a smart defensive man and a sure handler of passes; Wes Pesler, the sophomore sensation of Ohio State; Ashburn, of Nebraska, one of the best defensive players in the West; Ed Messinger, of the Army, and Ted Roschewicz, of Carnegie Tech. Still other ends who deserve mention are Joe Truskowski, of Michigan, who is adept at harping team's success this season against accurate long passes in a manner approaching that of Oosterbaan; Siegenthaler, of Ohio Wesleyan, who has had much to do with that in relation to the microphone.

HOLDS TRUE TO TRADITION OF SEA

Captain William Carey, of the ill-fated liner Vestris, sank with his command when the ship foundered 300 miles off the Virginia capes on the Atlantic. Survivors of the disaster have related that when last seen, the captain was standing on the deck of the liner, making no attempt to save himself, just before she sank.

formidable opposition; Dudley Scholes, of Cornell; Provincial, of Georgetown, a big factor in that school's fine showing; the speedy Frank Baker, of Northwestern; and Frank Curtis, sturdy end of the Davis-Elkins outfit.

Pete Miller, leader of Loyola of the South is no slouch, and neither are Branch McCracken, of Indiana; this fellow Costigan, of Columbia, and Vansickel, of Florida.

Other ends who have received special mention by their play at times during this season are Collins, of Notre Dame; Lawler, of Princeton; Surina, of Ohio; Politt, of Fordham; Smith, of Wisconsin; Byng, of the Navy; Carlmark, of the Army; Reedquist, of Iowa.

Hicks, of Alabama; Phillips of California; Johnson, of Georgia; Jones, of Georgia Tech; Hornbeck, of Michigan State, and Hausor, of Kansas.
