EYES HAVE IT IN THE NEW HATS

By LUCY CLAIRE
Fashion Expert for Central Press and The Eccentric

There is no doubt whatever that the eyes have it in the new hat models of the season. The turban has come into its own. It may be of felt, velvet or hatter's plush, the last a little the newest note. It follows the lines of the face gracefully, frequently lifting abruptly over one eye, like that at the top of the sketch, or lifting in the center, like the beret effect model sketched in the center. But the vogue for the turban, like the vogue for brown, cannot be adopted by every woman. There are those who need a brim, be it ever so narrow, and those who need the brim a little wider, like the women whose eyes require glasses at all times.

Figures compiled by the American Optometric Association show that three out of every ten persons wear eyeglasses, and they further claim it should be seven. It would seem as though hat designers had taken this seriously into consideration this season, for it certainly looks as though the chic narrow brimmed hats had been created with an eye to things optometric. They have an air about them that brings out the best lines of the face, while at the same time softening the harsh details of the features.

For the Woman With Eye-Glasses
The two hats sketched at the lower left and the upper right are typical shapes for the woman who must wear eyeglasses with her left is of felt, untrimmed, and with its brim wide at the sides and narrow in the front, following the dip-in-the-back movement of the dress silhouette, although this model is short in the back, or dispenses with its back brim entirely. The Rebut model at the upper right follows the same silhouette with a helmet diversion of brim treatment. On this model Rebut perches a feathered bird head by way of trim. Rebut is also responsible for the beret turban in the center, which is of black felt with a tiny ruffling for the simulated brim that turns back from the face. Agnes is the designer of the little turban of sand metal and wool tulle, at the upper left.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

Peppers Stuffed With Creamed Celery
Cabbage and Tomato Salad
Baked Apples or Baked Bananas

I am trying to "put over" the idea of using more fruit for desserts. A well known physician recently printed an article saying nice things about the banana. Bananas may be had almost everywhere, all the year round. Let's get in the habit of using more of them, as the doctor maintains they contain many excellent food properties.

Today's Recipes
Peppers Stuffed With Creamed Celery—The outside stalks of celery are sliced and cooked in a very little water until tender. The peppers are boiled about ten minutes after stems and seeds are removed. A white sauce is made for the celery and the pepper shells are filled with this creamed mixture. Grated or cut cheese is put on the top and they are put under the broiler flame for two or three minutes or baked in a hot oven until the cheese melts.

Baked Apples—Wash and core sour apples. With a sharp knife cut a line through the skin around the middle of each apple. This will prevent the skin bursting as the apples cook. Allow a quarter of a cupful of sugar mixed with a quarter of a teaspoonful of cinnamon to five apples. Fill the cavities with this mixture, place in a baking dish and cover the bottom of the dish with hot water. Bake in a hot oven, basting occasionally with the syrup. More water may be added as needed. Apples may be "baked" on top of the stove by placing in a covered dripping pan and cooking slowly, basting occasionally. Corn syrup used instead of sugar produces a glazed appearance. Raisins and nuts may be used to stuff the cavities of the apples. In this case mix the sugar and water and pour over the apples.

Baked Bananas—Bake bananas in the skins in a moderate oven until they become dark in color and soft to the touch. Remove from the skins and sprinkle with granulated sugar and a few drops of lemon juice to each banana. Serve hot as a dessert. Green bananas may be baked and served without sugar and lemon to take the place of potatoes.

readily carried in the purse. Of course there are also the oxfords for those who wish to appear more intellectually sophisticated.

Surely with both milliners and optometrists guarding against the harsh details of lenses, there is no alibi for neglecting the eyesight, even though the eyes do have it in the new hats.

Shop Girl's Romance With Merchant Prince Surprises Home Town

(Exclusive Central Press Dispatch to The Birmingham Eccentric)
Albany, N. Y., Nov. 8.—Between a dreaming little shopgirl in her modest Albany home and a wealthy London merchant prince stood more than 3,000 miles and $40,000,000.

But what are miles and money to Dan Cupid, little sprite of love and romance, whose arrows have coursed over the world? Dan Cupid just fitted an arrow to his string and—wham!

Chalk up a bullseye in the person of John Robert Lawson-Johnston, a young multi-millionaire merchant of London, England. Cupid fitted another arrow—wham!

Mark down the name of Miss Betty McCormick, Albany shop girl, whose folks live in a brick tenement in an unpretentious street not far from St. Ann's, where Betty learned her A. B. C.'s and where she was picked as the prettiest girl in her class.

Though the papers and the people of Albany were not to know about the romance between Betty and John until the wedding in New York, it leaked out somehow.

Betty, said her folks, met John in London when she visited there some time ago. The first marriage of Lawson-Johnston, once an attaché of the British embassy, was to the former Barbara Guggenheim. It is said they were divorced a year ago. The marriage of Betty and Lawson-Johnston is to take place at New York soon, it is reported.

How To Achieve Beauty

By Mme. Helena Rubinstein

Arms, Wrists and Hands
Pretty arms are almost necessities to the modern young woman who is constantly faced and frequently phased by the demand of fashion for sleeveless gowns.

We realize that our arms are not merely useful appendages, but very important and significant beauty attributes. On the condition of arms, elbows, wrists and hands will very often depend the success of an entire costume.

Before I go into the arm exercise which my title promises, let me tell you again about the correct care of the skin of arms and elbows. Perhaps I've told you this story before, but it brings up a point so often overlooked, that I cannot help but feel it is well worth repeating.

In Paris, there is an objectionable phrase to be heard at some of the leading couturiers. It is "the American elbow." American women, I'm sorry to say, have earned this appellation by the distressing elbow condition to be seen on the average woman who goes over there to be clothed. Look honestly and frankly into your mirror now. Have you the American elbow? If you haven't, don't run any risks. And if you have, correct it by all means, and at once. Either the twice a day, regular use of cleansing cream or
