G. H. MITCHELL SUCCUMBS TO HEART ATTACK

(Concluded from Page 1) the insurance business. He was also village clerk. He witnessed the change from a cross-veed to the Rev. Floyd E. Logee, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, officiated at the funeral services. The active pall bearers were: Charles J. Shain, David Roy, Hunt, Dr. N. T. Shaw, William Masters and James Todd.

Those who served as honorary pall bearers are: Dr. M. D. Johnson, Frank Hagerman, Harvey Staley, Sam Mills, William Hunt, Richard Dennison, C. W. Crawford, E. A. O'Neil, William Davenport, Bert Peabody, May Levison, H. W. Baxter, Bluzge Shadbolt and Martin

A tribute was paid Mr. Mitchell by Charles J. Shain, who knew him from childhood. He said: "Remembered by many people as a good postmaster, in recent years he will realize the scope of George Mitchell's experience and the field of business. Into the early Nineteen Hundreds, Mr. Mitchell was president of the Birmingham Eccentric, a practicing draught in charge of a drug and grocery store at the corner of Pierce and Maple avenues, telephone manager, and partner in a private bank, each enterprise successful in its own field.

Training School "Prior to 1900, his drug store was a training school for the young men of the community and many are his pupils who later made a mark for themselves. Among the earliest, was Hal H. Gibbs, later prominent in the drug business of Northern Michigan. E. L. Keyser at present secretary of Pontiac Board of Commerce, Frank W. Blair, president of the Union Trust company, Maurice Blair, his brother, who for years was active in the drug business in Birmingham and Royal Oak, John Barron of Barron and Wines, former local druggist at Howell.

"Mr. Mitchell was noted in those days for his charity, many indigent persons blessed him for his timely aid in their hour of need.

His sense of humor was proverbial in the Birmingham of a years ago. He was enjoyed by all with whom he came in contact and was welcome in any gathering. A great practical joker, he was happiest when playing a prank on "Whitney" Almeron Whitehead, his partner.

"With malice toward none, and with charity for all, a cheery word or an amusing tale for his friends and acquaintances, George Mitchell will be long remembered by those he has left behind."

More and better airports is a crying need today, said Major Royce; they should be operated by a modern railway station, be publicly owned, and for the use of airline companies as well as private individuals. Due to the anticipated growth of the airline industry, he suggested that in large centers of population hangars should be constructed in and about the suburbs, and not at the main airport.

Prior to Major Royce's talk the various clubs joined in community singing, led by Louis Hascall, Harold Laidlaw, Russell McBride, and Robert C. Peck, song leaders of the Rotary, Gyro, Lions, and Exchange clubs, respectively. Vocal solos were presented by Templeton Moore and Miss Alice McCord, while several violin and piano numbers of old time melodies were played by Joseph Brooks, a member of Henry Ford's old time dance orchestra and father of the late Harry Brooks, aviator, and J. B. Wood, of Franklin, pianist.

Villagers and the Village

By THE WANDERER Telephone operators in general are an unsung group of hard working people whose efforts they past the attention of those with whom they talk daily, but this change from a cross-veed in performing her duties, brought forth commendation from the entire village police department. She is Mrs. Amelia M. Renwick, night operator. Sgt. Richard Lawler was on duty at the police station Monday night when Patrolman Henry Millebrandt was shot by thugs who escaped in an automobile. It was necessary for him to communicate by means of the telephone with neighboring police departments immediately. This is what he said: "Mrs. Renwick saw the need for quick action and she certainly gave it. She had taken the trouble to learn the numbers of all neighboring departments and she had them connected with our office as fast as I could talk to them. Within a remarkably short time after the shooting every mile of enforcement agency within miles of here had been notified and were on the look out for the men. It was the finest co-operation I have seen in the history of the department. As can be said for her service."

There are often many echoes of this news. One came to our attention this week after Andrew Alenworth crashed in his plane in a Puritan avenue, Detroit. Billy Dove, in the composing room of The Eccentric, was well acquainted with the pilot and had flown often with him. "It is strange to read where something happens like that to a person one knows well," he said. "Usually, the papers are filled with news about perfect strangers."

Command of the United States Army Selfridge Flying Field at Me. Clemons, who talked on the progress made in aviation, and prophesied something of the future of this newest mode of transportation. Six hours before he was called upon to speak at the banquet, Major Royce had led a squadron of 19 Army pursuit planes in maneuvers over Birmingham and vicinity.

Major Royce compared the history of the airplane to that of the automobile, and stated that, with the development of proper airports over the country, people will soon be travelling via air, by rail, or bus. "Planes are now under construction that will carry 150 passengers, with crew of seven, built with three decks, and propelled by 6000 horsepower engines," declared Major Royce. "Soon we will have airports capable of carrying 500 passengers, with trailers in the shape of airplanes, to be dropped, as required; these would be equipped with plane parachutes which would land the airplane on the earth in case of accident. Also we will soon see the time when dirigibles will be used to reach the earth at the equator without landing."

Urges Airports Major Royce said that Birmingham needs a swimming pool. He said that it would be a valuable recreation and fills an important place in the life of children. He felt that a municipal pool should be centrally located, however. The new Community House seems the logical place for a swimming tank. This would be preferable to a tank located in the Barnum School."

CURRENT COMMENT

I believe the proposed pool in the Barnum unit is the best present solution of the problem. A time will come when the majority of schools here are equipped with tanks, and support the main issue for the swimming pool in the next school election."

Mrs. Fletcher Richards, of Yorkshire road: "I am convinced that Birmingham needs a swimming pool. It would be a valuable recreation and fills an important place in the life of children. He felt that a municipal pool should be centrally located, however. The new Community House seems the logical place for a swimming tank. This would be preferable to a tank located in the Barnum School."

Mrs. Charles J. Shain, president of the Community House board: "The two proposed bond issues for the completion of the Barnum unit are necessary progressive steps in Birmingham. A swimming pool would be an asset to the village and I believe that it is a matter that comes under the jurisdiction of the board of sanitation. It is too complex a problem, involving too much detail in administration for the Community House to attempt."

Miss Nettie Bauer, recreation director of the Bloomfield Hills School: "I intend to support the bond issues for the Barnum unit, especially that pertaining to the swimming pool. Swimming is an ideal recreation for both children and adults and should be provided in the schools. It is not a matter for a Community House. It would be too much of a drain on their budget. It is a matter that should be presented to the general public for their vote, as in the proposal issue for a Barnum pool.
