KUNSKY-BIRMINGHAM
Today (Thursday)

"Interference," boasting talking scenes from beginning to end, closes its two-day run here today. This picture is outstanding not only because of the talking feature, but also due to its exceptionally fine cast of players who' delighted audiences yesterday with convincing and appealing dramatic performance.

Friday

Billie Dove has been a countess and a duchess—besides an untitled girl—but in "Adoration" she has climbed high in the social register and is a princess. However it isn't long that she is permitted to reign in that capacity, for revolution drives the titled folk from Russia and the princess and others find American cities: Philadelphia, Chicago, Detroit and Cleveland, by ways only lately that pressure was brought to bear upon the Soviets, who brought this English company to this country for a New York engagement only, to arrange for a short American tour, and it was through the efforts of E. D. Stair, of the Detroit Theatre, that his house was finally included in the itinerary.

Supporting Miss Lillie will be a company of nearly 100. These will represent a chorus of 40, musicians and stage crew. The entire organization has a personnel that is almost 100 per cent English born, the exception being Miss Lillie herself, who is a native of Toronto, and one other member of the company. When Miss Lillie comes to the Cass it will be just four weeks after her run of 30 weeks in the Selwyn Theatre, New York, and following a two weeks engagement each in Philadelphia and Chicago.

Aside from her appearance in two editions of "The Charlot Revue," this marks the first time Miss Lillie will be seen in an all-English production in several years. Noel Coward wrote the book, music and lyrics of "This Year of Grace" which was originally produced in London by Charles B. Cochran, and no doubt is superior to any other revue previously presented in this country or England, and will go down in history as one of the finest bits of musical extravaganza. It is in two acts and twenty scenes. One of the many song hits "A Room With a View" made a great impression upon the Prince of Wales. The cast, in addition to Beatrice Lillie, includes Moss and Fontana, who are featured and two score of other principals.

Saturday

Startling and beautiful photography is brought to the motion picture screen in prairie fire scenes of the film version of the Zane Grey novel, "Sunset Pass." The range fire and other exterior scenes of the production were filmed in Arizona at the actual setting of the Zane Grey story.

Sunday and Monday

One of the most beautiful and most difficult photographic accomplishments ever recorded by a motion picture camera is to be seen in John Gilbert's latest starring picture, "Desert Nights." An actual sunrise serves as a background for one of the scenes. The sun can actually be seen moving through the billowy black and white clouds which characterize dawn on the dazzling sand wastes.

Tuesday and Wednesday

One of the very first of the many laughs in "The Ghost Talks," the 100 per cent talking comedy feature, is caused by a noted comedian who appears in his particular production for only a brief moment. The comedian is Sammy Cohen, the private Lipinsky of "What Price Glory." He is in the hotel lobby in which part of the action of "The Ghost Talks" occurs, and with a bellboy suits over a precious bit of humor.

U. OF D. PLAY

"Hoofs, My Dear," the third annual opera of the University of Detroit, will be presented at the Temple Theater in Detroit for one week beginning Sunday evening, April 28. Jack Tolbert, the freshman in the school of commerce and finance, plays the role of Suzanne Sedigree, the feminine lead. Opposite him as leading man is Frank Kellet, a junior in the college of arts and science as Lee Duffing Jr., the non-repulsable lover of Suzanne. The leading comedy roles are taken by John Galbo, as Nero Migawd Tothee, George Morris, as Shinola, Thomas Roden, as Cynthia Pedigree, and Flavio Brooker, as Doc I. O. Dine. Minor parts are filled by Henry Annas, Jack Ratcliffe, David Leahy, Edward Corbett and Sidney Solomon.

CASS

An event of theatrical interest is the coming of Beatrice Lillie to the Cass Theatre, Detroit, in Charles B. Cochran's London Revue, "This Year of Grace" next Sunday night, for one week only. This engagement cannot be extended and only the Saturday matinee will be given. After the local engagement Beatrice Lillie will visit Cleveland for a week and then go to Canada for a two weeks engagement prior to sailing for London the latter part of May.

Following her runs of nearly two years in London and New York in "This Year of Grace" Miss Lillie is playing only four other American cities: Philadelphia, Chicago, Detroit and Cleveland. It was only lately that pressure was brought to bear upon the Soviets, who brought this English company to this country for a New York engagement only, to arrange for a short American tour, and it was through the efforts of E. D. Stair, of the Detroit Theatre, that his house was finally included in the itinerary.

CIVIC

"Behold This Dreamer," an amusing comedy by Fulton Oursler and Aubrey Kennedy, opens for its first Detroit engagement at the Detroit Civic Theatre, Monday night, April 29. George Blackwood, Miriam Sears, Craig Ward and Walter Sherwin have the leading roles.

This story of a modern young business man who wants to be an artist was presented at the Cort Theatre in New York with Sylvia Field and Glenn Hunter with great success. Charley Turner—played by Glenn Hunter, has married a girl with exactly the opposite temperament.

Clara, his young wife, prefers to have him make successful brushes rather than paint great masterpieces. Her father agrees in thinking Charley in need of a mental rest, so he is packed off to a private sanatarium. The result is that he has the leisure to paint, and his first picture is hailed as a find. What happens next is a surprise and a cause for much laughter. The entire play is built upon a delightful note, yet with an underlying truth that makes Charley's protest hit home.

During the second week there will be three special performances of Eugene O'Neill's well known play, "The Great God Brown," Monday night, May 6, and Tuesday matinee and night, May 7. This play made a sensation in New York. One scene was presented several years ago by the Guild at the Detroit Civic Theatre, and there have been many requests for the entire play.

LAFAYETTE

Since he last played in Detroit, Howard Thurston, magician, has added more than two score illusions to his carte de jour. The most startling of the new ecects are "The Million Dollar Mystery" and "Iasia." In "Iasia" a flesh and blood young woman actually vanishes in the dome of the theatre, over the very heads of the spectators.

The "Million Dollar Mystery" is the latest European sensation and one of the most baffling magical illusions ever conceived. In Thurston's "Million Dollar Whippet" a real automobile, loaded down with pretty girls, is flipped out of existence on a fully-lighted stage, with a mere wave of the accompanying hand.

Another new illusion this season is "The Magic Box Revue," a sort of Ziegfeldian Follies with a Thurstonesque twist. A dozen charming blonde ladies, garbed in the latest Parisian creations, are produced out of a modern Pandora's box. The Moth and the Flame" is a fantastic pantomime with more than a soupcon of mystery. The plot of the "Mystery of the Bathing Beauties" would make a mystery story and "The Mystery of the Blue Boxes" is a sort of puzzle in the fourth dimension. Conan Doyle, no doubt, would explain these mysteries on the hypothesis that the performer's having mediumistic powers. Pshaw, ton, who only smiles enigmatically at all attempts to invest him with preternatural powers, presents these illusions as nonchalantly as he plucks cards out of the air or meshes pigeons in a butterfly net over the heads of the audience.

Also the biggest new feature of the Thurston program this season is the debut of the magician's daughter, Jane. She is a singing and dancing comedienne, and also is developing in magic. In addition to singing and dancing she does a magic dialogue with her father and a charming act by herself. Her song, "My Daddy's a Hocus-Pocus Man," is one of the song hits of the season. The daughter of a wizard, Jane Thurston is some witch, too.

Thurston and daughter Jane come to the Hubert Lafayette Theatre for an engagement of three weeks, beginning Sunday night, April 28. Matinees Thursday, Saturday and Sunday.
