EVERY real boy wants a cowboy suit or an Indian suit. For it helps him to play the way he wants to play. Out-of-doors, pretending that he's a real Injun... or an honest-to-goodness wild westerner, that's play that every American boy is fond of. Make him happy with an Indian suit or cowboy clothes.

A NEW HOSTESS IN WASHINGTON. With the completion of the first game the field was marred. The players and umpires retired to the dressing rooms for the pre-season luncheon wait. During the interval Dick Nallin, with whom I officiated that day, and myself were in the clubhouse when we were interrupted by a knock on the door. President Fraze was calling on us for some information, he said. He demanded to know if it was imperative that the three players who were ejected from the first game would be ineligible for the second. We assured him that such was the case.

SPORTS. Fred Lindstrom. Fred Lindstrom, giant third baseman, was seriously considered for the most valuable player award for the American League last year. But if the form displayed at the southern training camp is an indication of what he has done in him this season, the prospect of a major league contract might just as well be given up.

WHY A TURBAN? The vogue of the new "tuck-away turbans" is supported by seven reasons, given to the Women's Home Companion by a New York hat expert: Because a smart Paris modiste originated the style and smart New York women have adopted it.
