

MUSIC PROGRAM FOR NEW ROTARY CLUB MEMBERS

A musical program, the first portion of it humorously done, was the feature of the Rotary club's program here Monday noon. The affair was in charge of Louis Haswell, Edgie Edwards, and Morsel Cook. Walter L. Connely, George R. Averill, and the club's quartette, composed of L. E. Oakgrove, David Ladd, Victor Peck, and George B. Boutwell, aided in carrying out the stunts. New Rotarians were added when the membership was increased to 50 by the admission of James V. Bagley and Earl G. Potter. Mr. Bagley, Bloomfield Township clerk, was admitted under the classification of business accounting, and Mr. Potter, who heads a travel bureau, under the classification of transportation. A number of Rotarians expected to attend the charter presentation of the newly formed Richmond club Thursday night. Phil J. Williams is in charge of the trip; he was born in Richmond.

Bits Of News Gleaned From Old Files Of The Eccentric—The Items That Make Up The Historical Background Of The Birmingham Of Today.

FIFTY YEARS AGO
We hope our readers will overlook any errors or omissions in this issue, having removed our names from the files of our present quarters in the room in the Stanley block, formerly occupied by E. L. Parker as a dentist office. If in the general bustle of moving, anything has been misplaced, we beg to be excused.

Now wouldn't it be a good idea for the boys about town to stop the dangerous practice of jumping on the cars? It is commonly indulged in by boys of from five to twenty years of age, and the recent narrow escape of Will Wright ought to serve as a startling example. Better stop it boys before your friends have to take you up in a dust pan.

This is the time of the year when farmers are unusually quiet. Amaranth Harris fell down stairs again and came out all right as usual.

HAIR BEAUTY DEPENDS ON CONDITION OF BODY

By MADAME RUBINSTEIN
I am going to tell you again about hair—but this time it will be about every type and color of hair, ash-blond, golden, Titan, silver, chestnut, black, white, auburn, naturally curly straight and permanently waved.

Had you realized that there were so many kinds and that they all require different care? Basically, of course, the care of all hair is the same. The proper care is health care, and it depends upon the good of general health and vigor. It requires good circulation which, in the case of the hair, means massage and brushing. And it requires cleanliness, which means proper shampooing and more brushing.

Heads of different colors, however, need different kinds of shampoos and rinses. Blonde hair, especially, must be carefully washed and rinsed to preserve its natural color and beauty.

Of all heads, I think the naturally blonde head can be the loveliest. Whether it is a pale silver-yellow, or a tawny-gold, with amber or honey-colored lights, or a soft, ash-blond, fair-haired type has something rare and lovely about it which sets it apart from the ordinary reds, browns and blacks of the darker-haired world, and makes us think romantically of fairy tales and princesses.

Truly golden hair is something to give up to, because it is the rarest of general hair colors. It often, but often, too, it darkens as they grow older. The golden-haired woman who stays golden-haired until she is gray—or silver—usually takes wise, golden-hair precautions.

Here are some of the rules she follows, in company with all her blonde-haired sisters, the pale daffodil-yellow type and the Titian.

She never washes her hair with tar soap or uses sage tea or an oily tonic, since these are bound to be darkening. Instead she washes preferably with a light-colored liquid shampoo, or with pure castile soap, shaved fine and melted in water. This course is a little more troublesome to use than the delightful prepared shampoo. Once every six or eight weeks she may dissolve a small amount of washing soda—about a level teaspoonful in a cupful of the liquid shampoo. This will keep hair light and fluffy, but it should not be used too often.

If her scalp is dry or the circulation poor and she needs a pomade or tonic to use with massage, she uses a pure, white cream, or a little mineral or castor oil mixed with cologne water. Either of these preparations will also help to take away the harsh, dry look of bleached hair, if she has been so unwise as to use a strong bleach to keep her hair light in color.

Mild bleaches, properly used, will not be really harmful. One teaspoonful of salts of tartar and two teaspoonfuls of strained lemon juice with three pints of water makes an excellent final rinse after the shampoo.

Camomile tea also makes a good rinse, especially for the Titian blonde. To make it, use ten cents worth of the tea boiled in a pint of water. Strain and apply evenly to the hair, leave on ten minutes, then rinse in tepid water.

No blonde hair is attractive when it is harsh and brittle—and the blonde whose hair is dry, and who wishes to effect a smooth Madonna-like style of hair dressing, or a sleek, golden-cap coiffure, should use a white brilliantine made especially for fair hair.
