ERECT NEW STORE FOR A. & P. HERE

Thirty Feet on N. Woodward Sold For $45,000.00 By Local Realty Firm

Ground will be broken at once for the erection of a one-story store building between the F. J. Mulholland Co. store and the Chateau Tea Room according to E. H. Tillotson, of Golgrove, Buck & Tillotson, local realtors, who negotiated the sale of 30 feet of Woodward frontage at approximately $1,500.00 per foot, from Mrs. Alfred Wilson to Harlow Davock and Henry E. Bodman.

When completed, the store will be occupied by the Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co. The building will be 30 by 90 feet, and its foundation will be strong enough to carry two more stories at some later time. The A. & P. Co. will have a five-year lease on the building, and will move their store, now located several doors south, to the new location by October 1, said Mr. Tillotson.

The land is 112 1/2 feet deep, and its sale at only $1,500.00 per foot sets a new high value on Woodward frontage in that location.

Mrs. Hilda Smith of Hull, Engr. beat Thomas Gorman, a pugilist, unconscious and was arrested.

THE COURAGE OF FAITH

Daniel 6:10, 11, 12-23

WHAT we have heretofore said concerning the Book of Daniel applies, also, to this lesson. Whether the book be an apocryphal type like the Book of Revelations, or a transcript of literal history, the character of the man who stands forth in these pages and in this incident is clear. Daniel is the type of man who knows no fear where duty is involved.

So far as actual life is concerned it was never, perhaps, altogether a right teaching that the man who does right will never suffer for it, or will always be miraculously delivered from the persecutions of his enemies even though his danger be that of a den of lions. The New Testament at some points, especially in the story of Jesus Christ, corrects some of the philosophies that have been too readily based upon the prosperity and happiness of those who follow the way of truth. The story of Calvary reminds us that there are real crosses in life and that there is such a thing as suffering for conscience sake.

Willing to Suffer

The real point about this story is not Daniel's deliverance, but Daniel's willingness to suffer and die, if need be, for the sake of his conscience. On the whole it is amazing in life what deliverance comes to such men. Sometimes the cross which they are willing to bear is spared them, but there would be no meaning in the deliverance if Daniel had been fearful of the result or had hesitated for a moment in the performance of his duty.

The teaching of the New Testament reinforced by the experience of Jesus and the experience of his early disciples is that, no matter what befalls a man, God with him and right is triumphant.

Here in the lesson we have set before us the things that may sustain a man in his purpose to do right and in his attitude of courage. Daniel's life was founded in real religion. He found a helpful discipline in prayer and in the reverence for sacred things. His sin was never open toward Jerusalem—that is, there was the love of spiritual Zion in his soul.

A man cannot ever rise very high in whose soul there is no sense of holiness. Nor did Daniel merely kneel in the prayer of petition and request. Like Paul at a later time, he mingled thanksgiving with prayer. There is strength in the man who can always find something in life for which to be thankful.

This religious faith and attitude lifted Daniel above convention and above the men who are always hoping that he will be lawless and quite another thing to live above law. Daniel dared to disobey a command that impinged upon his religion, but his religion led him to practice the sort of life that could not be described as lawless.

The King's Weakness

Perhaps one of the most interesting portions of the lesson is the reference to the king. He appears before us as anxious for the safety of Daniel and with a sort of faith that Daniel's God will deliver him, and yet he had been weak and unbold enough to allow Daniel to be cast to the lions. Is not that somewhat like men and women who are always hoping that God will bring things out differently from their own plan?

In reality the king stands before us as a despicable fellow, well disposed toward Daniel and hopeful for his safety, but utterly lacking in courage. It is Daniel who is the element of contrast to which we have referred. We take our stand in the modern world with the weakness of the king or with the strength and resourcefulness of Daniel. It is safety of the head when Daniel was to be ruler of an empire. "He that ruleth his own soul is better than he that taketh a city."

WOMAN INJURED IN AUTO CRASH

Truck And Machine Collide At Woodward And Haynes Street Friday

Miss Martha Crawford, of 105 Florence street, Pontiac, sustained minor injuries in an accident at 7:10 p. m. Friday at Haynes street and Woodward avenue. She was a passenger in a machine driven by Harold Streets, of 108 north Tazmania street, Pontiac.

According to police, the machines collided when Charles R. Hayward of 505 Fairwood avenue, Ferndale, who was driving a truck south on Woodward avenue, attempted to make a left hand turn onto Haynes street, directly in the path of Streets, who was proceeding north. Both drivers were released.

Enter Garage Here, Steal $31 In Goods

Police today are seeking the persons who entered Hall's garage at south Woodward and Humphrey avenues sometime after midnight Friday, taking merchandise valued at $31. The thieves are believed to have entered the garage by a window on the west side. No fingerprints were found, however, said Chief of Police James Alderson.

Plump Folks and Prickly Heat

A Health Talk by B. A. TePoorten

No, talcum powder isn't the right thing which the back is broken out with prickly heat. The powder may help a little, but the cause is inside the body and no amount of outside application and ointments will get at or remove this cause. Water only adds to the misery of the sufferer.

Prickly heat is common in hot weather when too warmly clothed or the person is plump. Prickly heat is a congestion around the sweat glands. It is quite often accompanied by stomach and kidney disorders and yields readily to spinal adjustments which restore the full degree of nervous energy to the stomach and kidneys.

Itching Is Stopped

"My stomach was bad and I had kidney weakness. I frequently broke out and the itching was almost more than I could stand. Sleep was almost impossible. Chiropractic care was the only relief I had on new years from these attacks. The itching stopped and the kidney trouble disappeared." M. C. Haveran, Chiropractic Review, No. 1043-A.

AT THE CASS THEATRE

The musical adaptation of Mark Twain's "A Connecticut Yankee," which recently concluded a successful engagement in Chicago, begins the second week of its engagement at the Cass Theatre next Sunday night. This lively, bustling harlequinade, spotted with high colors, full of ingenius quips and spiced with up-to-the-minute melodies, was written by Herbert Field, Richard Rodgers and Lorenz Hart, authors of "Dearest Enemy," "Boggy Ann," and several other big hits. It is being presented here by Lew Fields and Lyle D.

Andrews with the Vanderbilt Theatre cast intact.

Twain's great love for satire is given full rein in "A Connecticut Yankee," and the adaptation for musical comedy production follows the book closely.

Richard Lane, who heretofore has appeared in straight comedy and vaudeville, proves his versatility as Martin, a Yankee who dreams all sorts of strange things when his bride-to-be breaks a bottle over his head when she finds another girl's arms around him. Lane, a likeable chap, fits into the role as if it were made to order for him. In addition to being a first-rate comedian, he sings and dances unusually well.

That veteran player, George E. Mack, is well cast as Merlin, the mighty magician, while Paul Everett does some good acting as King Arthur. Nana Bryant, Mary Adams, Starke Patterson, Gordon Burby, Bert Saunders, Helen Gates and Francis W. Burbary are others in the large cast who do their share in making "A Connecticut Yankee" one of the most delightful entertainments seen in Detroit in several seasons.

"My Heart Stood Still," "Thou Swell," "I Felt at Home With You," and "On a Desert with Thee" are the song hits which, no doubt, you have whistled, hummed, sung or danced to during the past year or so.
