FOREHEAD IS EXPOSED IN FALL HATS

By LUCY CLAIRE

Fashion Experts for Central Press. Though this has been a particularly long and profitable fall season, owing no doubt, to much hot weather, and though straw is still in demand, the vital question of what we are going to wear in the season just ahead is always timely. Retailers are showing fall models in quantity and diversion, while they overlap seasons with marked-down prices on their remaining straws.

There is a tendency in the new fall models toward a daring off-the-face movement, exposing much more of the forehead than heretofore. This seems but a logical move, since the eyes have had it all to themselves for so long.

While, of course, the felt hat will be with us for the fall and winter, still it is finding a rival in the fabric hat. Velvet is sponsored for an early fall number, and such materials as kasha, broadcloth, tweeds and cloth plaids, are being fashioned into turbans and small brim types, with insets of contrasting color or with stitching. The idea is the ensemble—a hat to match the frock or coat, not only in color, but as nearly as may be in fabric as well. Though contrast has entered into the ensemble, it is still smart to match hat, shoes and frock in color, and now, as far as the hat is concerned, in fabric. As brown is being the leading color for the fall, it will not be difficult to match the ensemble cloth in a brown hat, and to secure a matching pair of shoes in brown kid.

Perhaps the most favored model is the beret, after Agnes, as shown at the upper left of the sketch. It appears in both sports models of fabric to match sports suits, and in velvet for wear with afternoon frocks. Another favorite is of brown antelope, as shown in the sketch. It looks as though it might have taken inspiration from the tricorne. The brim rolls off the face on one side and dips down over the ear and cheek on the other. A cute little hat in bonnet silhouette, which would be charmingly becoming to some types and most unbecoming to others, would seem to take inspiration from the aviation helmet. It is of black, Austrian velvet, and has a pleated self-fabric ruff at the back, with a brief eye veil at the front.

Quite unusual is a hat by Agnes, known as the half and half model. It is well off the forehead, and comes down in folds over the ears with a turn under at one side. Another unusual model, by Gaby Mono, is of felt, with the felt slashed in scallops over the entire hat. It is in bonnet effect, with felt loops at the sides as the only trimming.

Brimmed Hats
As many women cannot wear the hat without some kind of a brim over the forehead, there are, of course, numerous other models that do not leave that part of the face entirely unshaded. But even these have a movement toward the back as note the hat by Marie Alphonine. This is a plain navy blue felt with a lift in the brim over the forehead, and a broadening over the side. It is trimmed with felt felt bows over the ear and on the crown, with long ends brought around the crown to the back.

It is the large hat absent from the fall models. An example of this type is shown in the black felt with shallow crown and wide brim. The brim sweeps down at the back, well covering the neck, with the dipped on one side effect, and a turn-back in a fold at the left front to lift it off the face.

WITH WOMEN OF TODAY

BY MRS. LILLIAN CAMPBELL

By LILLIAN CAMPBELL. Ruth Hanna McCormick, congresswoman from Illinois, is not the only member of her family to take an interest in politics. Her cousin, Mrs. Malcolm McBride of Cleveland, takes an active part in things political, and is past president and present campaign chairman of the Cleveland League of Women Voters.

At present Mrs. McBride is vigorously aiding in a fight to maintain the manager form of government in Cleveland, which is being jeopardized by a proposed charter amendment. The amendment goes to the voters for approval or rejection at a special election August 20.

In defense of the manager plan, which Cleveland adopted five years ago, Mrs. McBride says: "The administration of a great city is analogous to the management of a large corporation, and executive ability and moral character are needed by the city government in the United States and it has had its best five and a half years of government under the manager plan. "Details have been paid, miles of streets paved, garbage collection has been improved, the city is cleaner and more modern. We must not return to a wasteful form of government discarded by over 400 American cities."

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

MENU HINT
Hot Potato Salad Assorted Sandwiches Sliced Peaches Plain Cake or Cookies

This luncheon menu may be prepared early in the day, ready to serve. The potato salad can be cooked when you are using the oven and reheated. Serve six.

Today's Recipes
Hot Potato Salad—Peel potatoes and slice very thin, allowing one medium one to each person. Boil in salted water. Place layer each of potatoes, shredded cheese, sliced boiled eggs, blanched almonds and cracker crumbs. For more serving add other layers. Put several generous pieces together and soften with mayonnaise or sandwich spread. Make sandwiches and cut into three strips.

Assorted Sandwiches—A loaf each of whole wheat and white sandwich bread. One filling: six hard-boiled eggs, one-fourth pound bacon, browned crisp; one-fourth pound peas, minced together and softened with mayonnaise or sandwich spread. Make sandwiches and cut into three strips.

Whole wheat bread will afford another selection. Cut sandwiches into squares.

Buttered thin crackers afford a variety of fillings. Served with fruit, nut and cream cheese fillings, they are delicious.

Bread, butter and cold boiled ham is another choice. Cut these sandwiches in triangles.

The sandwiches, with the exception of the cracker ones, can be made in the morning, wrapped in waxed paper and placed in the refrigerator.

Economical Layer Cake—Two cups sugar, one-half cup butter, one-half cup whole eggs or one-tenth cup whole eggs and whites of two, one cup milk, one cup flour, two teaspoons baking powder, nine tablespoons sugar to a cream, add beaten eggs and beat again, then add milk and flavoring. Mix baking powder with flour and add. If not preferred filling may be used. This makes three layers and six small individual cakes.

Milady's New Fall Clothes To Offer Many Changes From The Modes Of Spring

BY HARRIET

LATE summer and early fall styles show radical departures from spring modes. Suits, frocks and coats emphasize the large part bouffants, scarfs, and trimmings play in costuming. Hats show a tendency to lift from the face and reveal the eyes.

Coats may be long or short but there should be some swing to fullness in them. Hats may be large or small but when one wears a typical sport hat, the face should not wholly conceal the eyes.

Among the high spots in the changing modes come the new necklines with their charmingly feminine lines and soft trimmings. The starting point is a bit of lace at the throat, the beige with a touch of chiffon, the figured print with a plain colored tie that knots a new way to give its wearer look more feminine are all the models that promise popularity.

It is, all in all, a season when women can do much to improve their appearance. A study of the appropriateness of square necks or V-lines with one's features and the set of one's head and neck is suggested. Some women look best in round hats, others in V. Others in square. Add to this the choice of a flat collar, a flaring one, a standing-up. Consider one to notice when buying suits or coats. If you are taking advantage of the early fall sales, for instance, make sure that the set of the collar is just right. Sometimes a small woman with a small head is entirely engulfed and outshone by too big a fur collar. This year there are flat, smooth fur collars many of the best coats. Choose a shape and a fur that suits your type and your coloring. Remember that your clothes make something for your appearance, you should never have to live them down.

Helen Wills, famed tennis player, is pictured at left in a Jean Patou creation; at right, a charming example of modern fashion which fits snugly to the head.

TYPICAL of the very new snuggly turbans that will be excellent this fall with fur coats or cloth coats with fur collars is a Parisian import of burgandy colored velvet with a tiny flower of matching felt on one side. This hat is really a modified beret, made on a little band that fits snugly to hold the drapes in shape.

New, too, is the way Patou tucks a bit of lace right through the front of the blouse, at neckline. Topping a figured frock, one usually is much better off with a simple, plain hat of excellent line. Both of these models are excellent for business girls, for school, for daytime shopping and lunching on dates and for general usefulness.
