

84 GIVEN JOBS DURING MONTH

Community House Report For November Gives Employment Survey

How the Village of Birmingham is solving its unemployment problem and relieving the impoverished families is indicated in the Community House report for the month of November.

Members of the organization recently conducted a survey of men who have been out of work for a period of more than five weeks and discovered that only 14 of these men were certain of going back to their jobs by Dec. 1.

Fifty-one women and 33 men were given part-time and permanent employment through the Community House employment bureau. Of the women, 33 were given work as maids and of the men, 24 obtained work as day laborers.

Donations Are Lower
Due to the large number of people who are unemployed the financial return for the month is $55 lower than it was for the same month last year.

The outstanding donation of the month was to a foreign family from south Birmingham. Five children were supplied with clothing and underwear, two girls with coats, father and mother with shoes and unlimited pairs of stockings.

In a few days the community will be supplied with large paper bags to be used for the collection of cast-off clothing and toys. The Community House will be glad to collect these bags when filled by citizens if notice is given. The increasing demand for clothing makes it urgent for clothing to cooperate in this matter.

LEGION WANTS NEW MEMBERS

Charles Edwards, Post No. 14 of the American Legion, is making his annual membership campaign throughout this month. Money from dues collected is for the benefit of the Hospital and Otter Lake Bilet. Lloyd L. Stanley, Commander, made a plea that dues be paid before December 28.

During the recent meeting of state presidents and secretaries held at National Headquarters at Indianapolis, Wisconsin, was awarded the $10,000 gold piece as a result of turning in the largest number of memberships, 13,000. Michigan placed fifteenth.

There will be meetings of unit No. 4 and 5 in the Veterans Building, 704 East Jefferson Detroit, Friday afternoon at one o'clock. Interested members of this unit are invited.

VILLAGE'S YOUNGEST AVIATRIX

"There's really nothing to it. I haven't done anything remarkable—no more than lots of women are 'doing every day.'"

And that's the only comment 15-year-old Cara Mae Keller, pretty Baldwin High School sophomore, will make on her experiences piloting the seven-passenger plane owned by her father, C. H. Keller, of Beverly Hills. Miss Keller is believed to be the only village woman to pilot a plane.

It was early this summer that Miss Keller had her first experience piloting. She was accompanying her father and a party of his friends on a hop to Lansing. For many months her father's pilot, Marion Sterling, had been coaching her in manning a plane. Suddenly he suggested she pilot the ship, so, unknown to the rest of the party, she took the stick, flying the plane the entire distance from Pontiac to Lansing.

Not until she banked over the home of her grandparents in Lansing did the passengers realize that the girl was the pilot. "They all thought that we were cracking up when I started to land," Miss Keller laughed. "Then they teased me, telling me how much they enjoyed the ride but how glad they were that it was over. Then they joked about my square curves. I wasn't afraid because I knew that the pilot was there if anything should happen."

In no way does Miss Keller seem awed by her flights. She takes them much as a matter of course. "I just concentrated, but I was so used to being in the plane that the piloting seemed perfectly natural," she said.

Aviation is no pose for Miss Keller. She merely loves the sport of flying. Piloting her father's plane is much the same to her as driving an automobile would be to other girls of her age. The exploits of women flyers do not particularly interest her. They do not appear heroines in her eyes, on the contrary she has an aversion to many women in the flying field. "Many of them are credited with flying when they merely accompany the pilot. They aren't responsible for the success of the flight," she said.

Although she plans to get a pilot's license, aviation as a career for women does not appeal to Miss Keller. For them it is simply an interesting hobby, she believes.

She is fascinated by aviation, but flying is not her sole interest. "Right now I'm busy going to school," she said with the sincerity of the young girl who is looking forward to years of high school and college study. For her flying has come to be just another part of her life. It interests her but it does not alter the regular scheme of things for this 15-year-old high school girl.

ELECT SHELTON D'MOLAY CHIEF

James S. Hassberger Chapter Chooses Him To Succeed Henry Way

The office of Master Councilor of the James S. Hassberger chapter of DeMolay is held today by William Shelton following their annual business session and election of officers Tuesday at the Masonic Temple. Mr. Shelton succeeds Henry Way.

Other officers are held as follows: Richard Fleming, Senior Councilor; Stephen Grace, Junior Councilor; Frank Hertz, secretary; and Gordon Thornton, treasurer.

Arrangements are now under way for the installation of officers at a ceremony Tuesday at the Masonic Temple. This affair is open to the public. A brief program and dancing will follow the installation.

Last night the Birmingham chapter put on their degree work in Pontiac. They plan to put on the work of the DeMolay degree team Monday in Royal Oak. This work is in preparation for the convalesce which will be held Dec. 14 at the Masonic Temple in Detroit.

The first helium gas to be discovered in Europe is said to have been obtained in Germany at a depth of 2,000 feet.
