WOOLENS COME INTO OWN FOR COSTUMES

By LUCY CLAIRE
Fashion Expert for Central Press and The Eccentric

Woollens have come into their own with the sports season of racing, hunting, golfing, football, and the other outdoor events of fall and winter. So strongly are wool fabrics sponsored that fine woollens have become le d'ennfer of the afternoon as well as sports costumes, as exploited by the Paris couturiers. In Philippe et Gaston's collection is featured a frock of navy woolen bordered with black braid, elaborated with disks of the braid over the hips, and lightened by plastron collar of white crepe and white crepe sleeve bands.

Premet introduces a frock of a fine gray and navy mixture of rough surface, with an enervated scarf of navy crepe. Doucet sponsors a model of black kasha, smartly cut in a frock of afternoon type. The only trimming is white kasha. Dusty red is being combined with beige by a number of society women here in America. Luchette at the Colony Club recently Mrs. Anthony Drexel Biddle, Jr., approved this combination in a red coat and skirt with beige trim.

Several of the other women present wore red cloth coats with beige frocks.

In the sporting events there is a varied color choice among the woollens worn by smart women. The more vivid hues are seen at the races, while the neutrals are the thing at the hunt. In the French hunt costumes the short jacket is much in evidence. A Molyneux sports suit, worn recently at a hunt meet, is of gray tweed designed in a large shadow check, with hip jacket, pleated skirt of the check, and a beige jumper. A plain belt matching the jumper, and arranged slantwise across the hips, is an interesting feature.

Another version of the short jacket worn at the hunt meet was of a reddish brown woolen material with large patch pockets, posed over a pink crepe frock. The double breasted jacket suit worn by one of the smart models. It was part and parcel of the three-piece sports suit of green flannel, which was afforded the skirt in a flared front pleat. A zigzag striped knitted sweater accompanied the suit.

How to Achieve Beauty

by HELENA RUBINSTEIN

Facial Lines Make or Mar Beauty

There's a little four-letter word that fashion has built her modern "cerdo" on. The word is "line." Wherever we're in a dress shop, a milliner's, a jeweler's or a beauty parlor, the significant sales point of every wide-awake merchant is "line." A gown is a sensation or a failure, a bargain or an unwarranted expense in just such measure as it possesses fashion's newest favorite—"line." So let's talk about lines—what they do for us, and what they do to us.

Perhaps the most fertile field for the most distressing of lines is the face—an excellent starting point for my little talk. Have you beauty-killing lines in your face? Suppose you take a mirror over to the sunlight and permit yourself to see—not what you want to, but exactly what the reflection tells you. Ask yourself honestly: "What age is reflected in the mirror?" And to complete the soul-harrowing performance, answer yourself as honestly and valiantly as you can!

If you aren't attractive to yourself. If you turn from a mirror with a qualm of self-reproach, I know just exactly what you've seen. Downward, unattractive lines—lines that protray weariness, disinterest, time, trouble, and all its unwanted children. It's too bad, but let's not waste time regretting an unfortunate circumstance. Let's get to work and rectify it.

We want not only to discipline those drooping, downward tendencies, but we want to cultivate happy, upward, beautiful lines. Lines that promise good health and good will; lines that spell beauty in every laughing curve of Proof that woollens will be good right through the Palm Beach season into summer is found in the beautiful new sheer woollens now in the hands of manufacturers. and, of course, the sheer jerseys and tweeds we met last summer. Arrangements are now under way for a gigantic fashion show, under the designation of the Golden Fleece Pageant, to be held in March, when all these new lightweight, sheer woollens will be shown in last minute Paris creations.

Well, how are we going to do it? Well, just suppose we take a little temper inventory first. Now, let me see. How long ago is it since you lost your temper? I'm afraid you could have done a little better than that. After this, let's add another two weeks at least in between times. You see, losing one's temper is a habit, and it's a habit I'm afraid we rather like to indulge in. There's something pleasantly wicked in reverting to savagery and primitive emotions, but it is so bad for your face.

I suppose you think you'd look grotesque if you started in smiling when you were good and angry—but you probably would be doing an infinite amount of good—not only to your soul, but to your complexion as well.

Downward lines spell age to the casual onlooker. It is very difficult to draw the line between the effects that time leaves upon the complexion and the marks that the slightly shady spots of your disposition do. A mouth that is drawn down, or that is too firmly set, may be evidence of bad temper up to a certain point, but yet we find that they have developed into definite muscular breakdowns which are followed by a complete relaxation of certain important facial muscles.

The same way with your eyes. I have talked repeatedly about expression lines, and it is quite true that they are uncontrollable to a reasonable extent. However, if you are going to aim for the beauty of an unlined skin, you must remember to preserve an even balance of disposition. Of course, you must remember that a face

LAW TAKES A HAND

Georgia Judge To Watch Over Election Of Women's Club After Factional Carry Dispute To Supreme Court

By ROBERT MORAN
Staff Writer for Central Press and The Eccentric

Atlanta, Ga.—For the first time in the history of Atlanta, and probably in the history of all Georgia, a mere man is supervising the election of officers of one of the country's leading women's clubs.

Following a long and hard fought legal battle, the supreme court of the state has decreed that the only court of the state that the only possible way for settling differences within the Atlanta Women's club is to hold a new election and Judge John D. Humphries, who presided over the hearings by the lower court, set the date, Jan. 23, and will keep a fatherly eye over the proceedings to see that both factions are given their legal rights.

This decision is the outcome of the struggle for supremacy between two groups, headed by Mrs. Charles Goodman and Mrs. John R. Hornady.

It reached its climax at the annual election held several months ago at which Mrs. Charles Goodman was declared elected president, despite vehement protests of the opposing group. Mrs. W. E. Price Smith held that nominations from the floor were not in order under rules of the club, and that the nomination of Mrs. Goodman was the only one before the club, the time for filing nominations having expired at a previous meeting. The meeting was adjourned by the fact that policemen had been called to insure order. When Mrs. Price Smith declared the elections over and the meeting adjourned, she and others left the club. Then the opposing group, headed by Mrs. Alton Richardson, Georgia director of the general federation of clubs, in the chair, held another election at which Mrs. Hornady was nominated and elected.

Permit yourself to cultivate that alertness and vivacity of expression which is more youthful than even an unlined skin could be, but preserving a certain amount of caution, especially later on in life, when muscles are inclined to be a little flabby and a little less quick to return to their normal tension. Use a moderate amount of self control, and when there are lines, make sure that they are upward ones.

Suggestions
Salad Materials
Grated raw carrots, grated raw young beets, grated yellow of white turnips, thinly sliced, or chopped onions make delicious salads.

Save for Flavoring
Save your celery tops, wash and dry them and place in the oven, turning them now and again. Store the leaves in an airtight tin, and when celery is out of season they will be useful for flavoring soups.

Cook It Gently
Bacon, whether broiled or fried, should be cooked gently. This makes the difference between crisp and hardened bacon. If correctly cooked the fat must be white when cold.

Ring out the scum!
Ring in the soft water!

Good news! Water need no longer be hard, even in this hard-water country. Scum need no longer form in the bathtub! Soft rings need no longer be scrubbed from tubs, dishpans or wash-basins!

Use Melo to soften hard water! It prevents the forming of the dirty ring. It makes water delightfully soft. It saves from 1/4 to 1/2 the amount of soap ordinarily used. It makes soap much more effective. With or without soap, water softened with Melo is a wonderful cleanser. Get it at your grocer's.

Lighting Counsel for Home, Store or Factory

Home, store and factory lighting frequently are not used to maximum advantage. A paint brush often works wonders, and a dust cloth may save electric current now wasted. Decorative illumination lends charm to the living room; effective show window lighting attracts trade; and factory production keeps step with candlepower.

A Detroit Edison Home Lighting Adviser can offer you many valuable suggestions for using the decorative quality of light to improve household illumination. The counsel of our Illuminating Engineers is always at the service of merchants and factory managers.
