DREAMS OF SERVICE SEND VILLAGER TO HOME FOR AGED

Because she wanted to go where she could be of service to others, and because no one in Birmingham looked to her for help any longer, an 86-year old lady Friday closed her home and went to live in the Chelsea Home for the Aged, in Chelsea, Michigan. The old lady is Mrs. Emma A. Rowe, of west Maple avenue and Henrietta street, who for more than 20 years has been known to the village, especially through her work in the Methodist church. She is believed to be the village's second oldest woman, Mrs. Elizabeth Thurlby being the oldest.

"Even when I was a very young woman I was convinced that we are here to be of service to others and I have always tried to find some little way to be helpful. Perhaps in Chelsea I can help those who are less well off than I," Mrs. Rowe said.

"Less Lonely"
She is a charming, cultured old lady who is cheerful and optimistic and enjoys every cup of life. Since the death of her husband many years ago she has been left alone in the west Maple avenue home which she has known for many years. She never complains of loneliness, but she smilingly admits that it will be "less lonely" to live with those of her own generation.

The Home she has chosen is near Manchester, her birthplace, a girlhood home when she was Emma Besse, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. W. H. Besse. I have had many friends who have gone to Chelsea. They have always liked it and I believe I will. Now I will have a number of persons to look up when I arrive.

Mrs. Rowe charmingly admitted that her preparations for going to the Home to many ways she thought of those days some 70 years ago when she was packing to go to Albion college, then a young ladies' seminary. "There was the same confusion in leaving and the same plans for looking up countless friends upon arrival there. Once again I am to be living entirely with those of my own generation just as back in school days," she said.

Hester Earle, "Me-thur"
It was shortly after her marriage to Milo A. Rowe in 1874 that Mrs. Rowe did one of her greatest services. Her husband, Rowe took Herbert Earle, well known resident of Bloomfield Hills, and her daughter, Miss Helen Atkins, into their home. The brother died in adolescence, but Mrs. Earle still regards the gentle old lady as a mother. It was through Mr. Earle's influence that Mr. and Mrs. Rowe moved here from their home in Deerfield.

"We wanted to be near our son," she said. "He felt that Birmingham was destined to be one of Detroit's finest suburbs, so he suggested that we move here. We moved and found it a delightful place to make our home."

Mrs. Rowe is a most tolerant person. She believes that the world of today is living at a faster pace than the world of her youth. There used to be more people traveling at a much more strenuous pace," she said. She believes that these hurried days will result in shorter lives.

Prizes Youth
"I have little use for those that are constantly condemning the younger generation," she said. "The world sometimes finds fault without realizing that their generation might have been criticized. The young people of today have more advantages than those of yesterday, but I believe that they will profit by these advantages just as much as the youth of yesterday would," she said.
