"Fun" Clothes Are One Of Summer's Problems

By MME. LISBETH

In planning the vacation wardrobe, the smart woman invariably finds sports clothes her most difficult problem—perhaps because she demands more of them. Sports togs must be sturdy, washable, sunfast and smart in a casual, unostentatious manner...

Washable silks, as well as cottons, flannels, etc., are used for sportswear, and spun silk, which includes the shantung weaves, silk pique, striped and plain broadcloth, crepes, etc., are much liked. The typical sport wardrobe has gained new complexity. Frocks range in formality from the sleeveless tennis frock to the three-piece spectator costume suitable for the sidelines or for town wear.

The three-piece suit at the extreme left of the picture is a semi-tailored suit of the useful type which every smart wardrobe should contain. The crepe blouse should be worn as a tuck-in or an overblouse, and the trim jacket and skirt are in checked silk. The two costumes in the center are of shantung. The first frock is capacious colored, and combines two important style points—the sleeveless mode and the vogue for tiny flat bows. The second converts itself into a spectator costume by the addition of a seven-eighths length coat of blue to match the interesting facing. The silk pique costume at the right is particularly smart for tennis, and introduces a note of novelty in the two wide waist accented by a black leather stripe.

Margaret Ellen How, whose home is in Chicago and who is a student at Rockford college, Rockford, Ill., has been elected president of the Toib club, which, to the uninitiated, means little. By those "in the know," however, Miss How is considered a very important personage in the college life. As the head of this club, she has the authority to direct all student social activities during her senior year.

PROPER MENTAL ATTITUDE NEEDED FOR TRUE FEMINE LOVELINESS

By MADAME RUBINSTEIN

I am going to write to all the young girls the country over whose privilege it is to uphold the age-old tradition that youth should be beautiful. Of course it should be. But it isn't always. And because it can be I am going to urge the young girl to take care of her looks.

Beauty in youth is easy to have—easier than in later years, usually—because the young person's habits are not formed. She is making the foundation of her physical and mental personality. The one she will live with for all the rest of her life, perhaps. And she can so easily make it a beautiful one, by setting herself on the right track of sensible good looks care, doing daily a few simple things that will mold her body and her mind now, when they are pliable and responsive, to the beauty they can have.

I especially want to stress the importance of the proper mental attitude for the young girl to take toward herself and her possibilities. Beauty begins in the mind and character. If you wish for loveliness hard enough you may have it. But not by wishing alone. You must make your wishes work for you, carry out plans, follow simple rules, do things, to accomplish what you desire.

All you young girls who have ever felt that beauty has passed you by—that you are just "naturally plain"—and that it's no use trying to do anything about it, you've got to know that I promise you that you can be pleasant to look upon, charming and attractive and altogether lovely. The young woman doesn't live who, if she has health and intelligence, cannot be attractive. It rests with you to make yourself a delightful person. Begin now and work toward it. And first of all, feel assured within yourself that you can be lovely, that you are lovely. Remember that "within you there is latent beauty." Remember, "every woman can be beautiful" is my world famous rainbow of hope for each and every one of you. Make up your mind to develop it and put all fear and timidity aside, because fear and beauty do not get along well together.

If you think that I am promising an unbelievable gift in promising you beauty, remember this: Beauty today depends upon good and sensible care of face, hair, color, regularity of features or coloring. Beauty today is individual, it carries with the person. The girl with irregular features, red hair and even freckles, may be more quickly lighted to look at than a blue-eyed, blonde-haired girl whose features are as regular as a name.

Some few requirements beauty does make of anyone. Health is one, and a harmony of color and line, are two others. Under health comes the charm of a strong, supple body, neither too thin or too fat; clear, fine skin; radiant hair; white, well-cared for teeth; bright, fresh eyes; a pleasant, normal mind.

Under harmony of color and line comes the knowledge of how to move gracefully; how to dress your hair becomingly; how to use the right colors and lines in your clothes, and the best cosmetics, properly.

The young girl of normal intelligence can achieve these things. That is why beauty is possible for her, and why she should make a sensible effort to have it in the greatest measure she can.

There are numerous ways of getting rid of it without the family growing weary. Croquettes are one way, stuffing green peppers with much the same ingredients is another.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS MENU HINT Beef Croquettes Asparagus on Toast Lettuce, Green Onion, Radish Salad, French Dressing Strawberry Shortcake Coffee Today's Recipes Beef Croquettes—Two cups ground lean cooked beef, one cup mashed potatoes, three tablespoons gravy or stock, one tablespoon onion juice, one tablespoon chopped parsley, one tablespoon butter, tabasco sauce as desired, salt, pepper, dry grated bread crumbs, one egg beaten with one tablespoon water, fat for deep frying. Cook the parsley in butter, mix with meat, potato, gravy and other seasonings. Mold into croquette shape, dip in egg roll in bread crumbs, and let stand an hour or so to dry coating. Heat the fat to 350 degrees or until a cube of bread browns in 40 seconds. Place two or three croquettes at a time in the frying basket and fry slowly into the hot fat for two minutes, or until they are golden brown. Remove and drain on sheet of paper. Serve hot with parsley garnish and tomato sauce. Potatoes may be omitted in this recipe and more gravy or white sauce added. Place a carpet rug (not a rag rug) on the headdressing when it rains, placing it lengthwise in the middle of the spring under the mattress.
