Modernistic Trend Invades Curtain Hanging

By HILDA HUNT

With the unusual color schemes now in order with the trend toward modernism in interiors, the sheer white and yellow curtains are coming into their own. With the walls tinted in other than the old-time neutrals, and furniture covered in such colors as robin's egg blue, or a darker blue green, with yellow chair or small sofa by way of contrast, the window drapes would naturally have to be in solid color to match the upholstery. The figured chintzes have been used to the utmost, but a little newer is the elimination of side drapes with the tinted walls. Sheer white and yellow fabrics are being used in new ways, especially for curtains in the town house or apartment. Some very unusual effects in fabrics are being shown, as well as in the modernistic treatment. In the center of the sketch, for instance, is a truly modern treatment for a double window from one of New York's art galleries. The material is yellow chiffon. One layer, but slightly full, is used for the glass curtains. A narrow wooden frame is attached to the window. This is made of attached pleated pieces of the chiffon in cross sections, as illustrated. No side drapes are used.

Another simpler arrangement, not quite so modernistic, is shown at the left of the sketch. Here again the material is unusual. It is white glazed tartan, such as was once the fashion for the ball and is found round the valoped edges with yellow braid. A sheer white organdy could very well be substituted for the tartan. The brand should be in a color that tones in with the walls, unless the walls are in white or cream. The side drapes, shown in the sketch may be eliminated, but add to the artistic appearance of the window. With the modern glass shelf arrangement shown in the sketch, the inner glass curtain is omitted.

Summer Wardrobe For Girl In Town

By FRANCES Clyne

Fashion Writer for Central Press. Now that the girl who remains in town through the summer has a very different clothes problem to face than she who goes away, and in selecting her summer frocks, she should bear this in mind, and not make her summer wardrobe primarily designed to be worn in the country. This does not mean that a girl must confine her choice to dark and uninteresting dresses. On the contrary, she should make every effort to have her wardrobe composed of frocks that are both cool and gay and dainty, but she should learn to discriminate between those that will serve practically as well as prettily, and those that do more than serve prettily.

Wash dresses of cotton being in the fashion, as do pastel kid shoes, voluminous organdies and day-time garden party dresses. For these the girl in town will hazard silk checked gingham silks, checked organdies, tan, white and blue checked organdies, and checked gingham silks. One-piece tub-silks which bear up under frequent laundering, and the checked gingham silks make an attractive array for ordinary day-time wear, while for those important luncheon engagements, a little three-piece suit will prove to be a cool and attractive solution.

For Dinner and Dance
Early dinner and dancing in town is best met with a sleeveless chiffon dress, accompanied by matching jacket and semi-tailored straw hat, wide of brim and made of raffia. Without the hat and jacket, a frock of this type can be double duty when worn with the white or cream slippers, and with or without dinner shoes.

The girl in town will not need a sport spectator than a decorative, and to the girl who should provide herself with several simple two-tone crepe de chine frocks and blousing or coordinating flannel jackets, together with two sports hats of felt or straw, one light and one dark, and a pair of white or tan oxford shoes, she is supplied for any emergency of this type, and moreover with the type of wardrobe that can answer the needs of the school in the country as well as the work in the city.

A special warning should be sounded against the illusion that heavy dark dresses do not show dirt very readily; they are, therefore, clean. No girl can remain dainty in the warm weather simply by being behind the mask of a dark-colored frock.

Two of our summer models are pictured. The printed crepe de chine with raised collar, and the display of white and dark blue stripes against a white background, a circular skirt and five or six crystal buttons to match those that appear on the short jacket. A feature of this ensemble is the little draped lace collar with cuffs to match. A decorative motif against a background of black crepe satin is the effective material used for the evening frock. It has a graceful cape back and trailing hemline.

FRESH AIR AND SUNSHINE BEAUTY'S GREATEST AID

By MADAME RUBINSTEIN

Your summer vacation may be the perfect season for reclaiming your beauty if you make it so. And now, at its very beginning, I want to tell you how to utilize all the benefits of warm weather to the greatest advantage of your health and beauty.

These next months may constitute for you a period of renewed opportunity. It is the season when nature gives beauty a "second chance." All the dietary crimes, all the bad effects of exposure, all the steam heated rooms and improper attention to your health and good looks can be forgiven you, if, in the summer, you determine to right-about-face—and make up for the beauty that you scattered so carelessly to the spring and winter winds.

The summer is a good time for you to reduce—or to gain. None better. Exercise will do either—just as you choose. And very often the same exercise. For it is an accepted fact of scientific knowledge that well-exercised muscles take on just the right amount of flesh to cover them.

And the best part of it is that the exercises you take naturally and pleasantly in the summer as a part of your vacation-time recreation can be made to do double duty as a beauty-measure. Swimming, the pleasantest of summer sports, is an excellent form of exercise for developing beautiful graceful bodies. And golf, tennis, rowing, riding, walking, dancing, are all splendid exercises from a health and beauty standpoint. The best of health diets, of the type that benefit both your figure and your complexion, are quite in keeping with the food that most of us prefer in our warm weather. Vegetables are at their best, especially the fresh, green ones which will do wonders for your complexion as well as for your looks. Live with weeks of fruits, salads, vegetables and the dark breads, bran, whole wheat and graham, and see what tremendous inroads it will make on your aching, if you are trying to reduce. If you wish to gain, you will add to this diet plenty of egg, milk and cream, and cereals. But in any case, try to do without meat. And drink plenty of water—it's good for both your bodily health and your complexion. Fresh fruit drinks, particularly lemonade made without much sugar, are splendid for and very easy to take on a warm summer day.

But with all this benefit there must be some ill to leaven the measure—and there is, in the form of outdoor exposure's damage to your complexion.

First on the list comes the danger of tan, or a leathery kind of freckling, if you have the kind of skin that freckles. Let me remind you now that a source of prevention is worth a pound of cure, or more, when it comes to protecting your skin from these summer beauty ills.

If you are wise you will not wait till you have acquired a painful sunburn, or a leathery kind of tan, or a flock of cinnamon freckles, before you decide to take steps to gaining a beautiful summer complexion. You will begin, now, to sunproof your skin against all accompanying perils.

Today's Recipes
Chocolate Cookies—One cup butter, two eggs light brown sugar, two squares chocolate, melted, one-third cup milk, one and one-half teaspoons vanilla, three and one-half cups flour, two teaspoons baking powder, one teaspoon salt, one-fourth teaspoon soda. Cream the butter and sugar, add the eggs and beat well. Then add the melted chocolate and vanilla. Mix with the milk. Drop on well oiled baking sheets and green down with a spatula before baking. Bake in moderate oven—350 degrees—for ten minutes. These cookies should be soft and Canned Salmon—A good way to serve canned salmon is to turn it out upon a plate, leaving as whole as possible. Steam until hot, turn onto a platter, garnish with hard-boiled eggs, sliced, and slices of lemon and sprigs of parsley. Serve with cream sauce. Or, turn into a hard-boiled egg chop and in it and a little lemon juice. Or, after steaming, pour over a little cooked green peas seasoned with butter and milk.

Suggestions
Raw Food Combinations
Raw foods should be included in one meal each day. Tomatoes and lettuce is a favored salad combination. Others are watercress and young onions, cucumbers, radishes or lettuce. Sprinkling grated carrots over a salad just appears to support it, though its appearance is made by cutting a tomato in quarters, leaving one-half cup, two teaspoons of oil, and one-half cup of green peas. Turn each section place slices of cucumber and fill in the center with sliced radishes. The cabbage mixed with mayonnaise and served in a section of cabbage, and green pepper and minced onions mixed with mayonnaise and served in a section of cabbage, then garnished with pimento
