For the woman with large hips it is suggested by a designer that capes, dainiel seams and similar details that fill out the figure above the waist tend to make the hips look more slender, or, at least, take the accent off the hips.

CHICAGO'S RICHEST New Million-Dollar Heiress Returns To School

By ROY J. GIBBONS
Central Press Staff Writer
Chicago.—How would you like to be able to write a check for $1,000,000, girls?

Order your hose and gloves by the dozen pairs, get your hats direct from the Rue de la Paix and have a standing order for corsages with the florist.

And that's not the half of it. Miss Rose Marie Baur, 18 years old, can do all these trifles and then some. As Chicago's richest girl, worth, it is estimated, more than $2,500,000, she can write her own ticket for almost anything from a trip to Europe to a husband.

Rose Marie, the daughter of Mrs. Bertha Baur, Republican national committeewoman from Illinois, inherited two-thirds of her father's estate recently on reaching the age of 18. She made the trip from Bryn Mawr college in Pennsylvania, where she is attending school, to assume formal charge of the fortune, left her when her father, Jacob Baur, the lunatic carbonic magnate, died intestate nearly 17 years ago.

A scratch or two of a pen and the money was hers to do with as she pleased.

But Rose Marie didn't seem to think she was in any way different from any other 18-year-old girl. Her mother, who was once a stenographer and later managed the affairs of her husband's business, gave a party in her honor. Not too large a one. And Rose Marie started back for Bryn Mawr.

She can still write the check, or have any of the other things. But she prefers going back to school. Friends declare she says that the money might be lost or it might even vanish. But in learning Chicago's richest million-dollar heiress appreciates that she has something that can never be taken from her and will always stand by as the staunchest kind of ally.

LAST WORD IN BRIDES

By FRANCES CLYNE
Central Press Fashion Writer
There are brides—and brides. But where is the one who doesn't seek the best-looking wardrobe her purse can afford? From her smallest piece of lingerie, to the important wedding gown and veil, the modern girl wants it to be the "last word" in chic and loveliness.

In selecting her trousseau, the bride-to-be looks ahead for a few months, considering what her activities will be after the nuptials—whether her home will be in the suburbs—or in a city apartment—whether she will engage in sport—or remain at home, and whether hers is to be an elaborate honeymoon trip, or a very short, quiet one.

The temptation to buy elaborate, frilly outfits for every occasion is the bugaboo of most trousseau shoppers. Beautiful simplicity in attire stresses the youth and vivacity of the modern girl, and frequently the impression that she makes as a bride when entering a new community, is a lasting one. By beautiful simplicity in attire stresses the youth and vivacity of the modern girl, and frequently the impression that she makes as a bride when entering a new community, is a lasting one.

By the individual of the wearer, the bride's gown should express the dignity of the occasion, and the individuality of the wearer. Most girls still cling to the tradition of white satin and lace, but for those who find pure white a trying color to the complexion, there are the lovely off-shades of cream, ivory, cream-pink of pearl, and egg-shell. The softly fitted princess lines are flattering to the slender figure, and a moulded sleeve, that is shirred from the wrist to the elbow, goes well with this type of gown. Lace and tulle are the ideal combination for the bridal veil, but the manner of draping it is one of individual choice and depends upon the type and features of the bride-to-be.

No need to tell the prospective bride how to select her underthings. This has been undoubtedly done long before the other essentials of clothing, and much care and thought have gone into their purchase. If they are chosen, however, with an idea to line and material rather than ornamentation, they will look prettier after laundering and will last much longer.

Next in importance to the bridal gown is the "going away" costume for the bride. The summer bride will find the customary tweed or worsted ensemble, trimmed with fur, rather in appropriate because of its warmth. An interesting "departure" is offered in a coat of very supple wool crepe, your little boy objects to taking a bath, try this phrase: "It isn't just the dirt, it's the epithelial debris."

SHEPHERD'S PIE

(Mrs. Mary Morton's Weekly Tested Recipe.)
Line a small baking dish with mashed potatoes. Cut pieces of any left over cold meat into dice about an inch square. Fill the dish nearly full with the meat. Pour a quarter of a cup of gravy or soup stock over the meat. Sprinkle with salt and pepper, and cover with mashed potatoes. Place in the oven until the potatoes are brown on top.

This menu for a day was planned for two business women keeping house. A man and woman would be just as pleased with the food served. I think. Grapefruit or oranges would save time in getting the breakfast. I should think, unless the surprise were made the evening before.

Today's Recipes
Baked Parsnips—Cook sliced parsnips in slightly salted boiling water until tender. Arrange the slices on a flat baking dish, cover generously with butter, cinnamon crumbs and place slices of bacon on top. Put in hot oven until bacon is cooked.

Apple and Cheese Salad — Select apples which do not cook in a sauce. Pare and core and boil until tender in a syrup to which have been added enough cinnamon candies to color a bright red. It will be necessary to keep dipping the syrup over the apples, while cooking, with a spoon. Remove apples to platter, and when cold and ready to serve, stuff cores with cream cheese mixed with chopped nuts. Serve with mayonnaise on lettuce.
