New York.—The kids in New York last year sat out away $2,777,782 in their school banks.

That's altogether too much money to have lying around idle. Some enterprising Wall Street money should get after the congestion for installing stock tickers in the school rooms and insure the young minds to the glories of Sliding Down the Ticker Tape.

With the current crop of Saps definitely out of The Market why not start to work at one to train up a new batch?

WHITEMAN'S TRADEMARK
Whenever Paul Whiteman, Olese Oboe Coxeter, decorates a billboard, a music sheet, a newspaper or a ticket agency poster with his illustrious monster, there invariably accompanies it a handmaster's head—including all chins. The picture appears even on the banners on the Hanover checks, drawn on the personal National bank. The caricature is interest. There's Wallace Ford, "head man" in "The Nut Farm," a play brought from Chicago. Left an orphan at the age of two, Wall was reared by a Liverpool fishmonger and his wife. At 13 he was chore boy on a ranch in Alberta, Canada. Tiring of the monotony of the life, he tramped to Winnipeg, where he got a job wiping engines. That didn't appeal to him for any length of time and he signed up as delivery clerk for a fashionable pill roller of the town. One blue and gold spring morning he dropped a bottle of castor oil on the top step of the druggist's wealthiest customer and an hour later found himself "at liberty." Next he donned the uniform of a theater usher and becoming stage-struck hooked up as super with a side-wheel stock company, where he learned the grotto art of make-up and the jargon of backstage. Then he did what they all do. He headed for the Big Town. Finding Belasco, Shubert, Erlanger, Hopkins, Bill Brady, Hammerstein and Ziegfeld with all the talent on hand, he could possibly use, he whiled away the time waiting for an opening by washing dishes in a vegetarian Nose Bag. "Seventeen" was produced with Wally in the cast and from then on, big time, big

FORCED FROM JOB AFTER 61 YEARS

Ottawa, Ill.—Jim Kelly has been pushed out of a job he held for 61 years. The pushing process was not due to the age of the

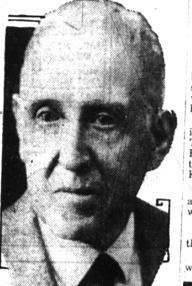

The present enforced vacation was opened in Ottawa with a great flare of trumpets. Jim Kelly strayed away from his home nearby to see what it was all about and was put to work as a bell hop. Later he became day clerk. Still later he became day clerk. He wore out the building which today is in the hands of wreckers, while he remains as good as new.

One year from now there will be a new fireproof hotel on the site of the old, and after a year's vacation Jim Kelly will return to his job as day clerk.

When Kelly returned to the job a newspaper writer asked him where he had spent his vacation. "In Davenport," said Kelly. "Report or relatives?" asked the reporter. "Oh, I just stayed at a hotel, went to the circus one day and did the baseball games."

"Rotten vacation," said the reporter. "I know, I know," said Kelly. "You must have experience, and that was my first vacation. I'll try and do better next time."

When Kelly moved from the hotel where he had held a job for 61 years he vacated a room where he had lived for more than half a century without a break.

JIM KELLY
Jim Kelly. It was due to the fact that wreckers began tearing down the building in which he served. In August, 1928, a new hotel house, he is big success.

TABLOID TALES
Josef Rosenstock, new German director at the Metropolitan Opera House, who is only 34—and what a baton he bats! . . . Those courtesies of Arnold's headquarters . . . Mr. Dewey Wineglass, the Harlem dingo, with the soup-and-fish and opera in the only costume he owns and naturally all he ever wears . . . Old Tina at the Players' Club reciting the antics of the Cherry Sisters, the world's worst Sister Act.

Heywood Brown, corn-fed philosopher, who wears a bullet proof vest (whenever he remembers to put it on) since receiving a batch of threatening letters . . . Audience in Carnegie Hall hissing the "Variations" of Arnold Schunberg, played by the Philadelphia Orchestra . . . The fine acting of Otto Kruger in "Karl and the Theatre Guild" . . . A resident of the Ebony-and-Ivory Belt dropping into Brentano to acquire a copy of "Sister Carrie," first tome of Teddy Dreiser . . . Leon, Harlem poolroom proprietor, who once did "Society" for a Boston sheet.

At a recent family reunion in Beaver Dam, Wis., 40 persons ate spaghetti of an age 100 years old. The egg was brought from China by Miss Hazel Taylor, a member of the family.
