

VILLAGE BOYS ATTEND MEET

Two leaders and 12 boys from Birmingham will attend the annual conference of the state Hi Y clubs in Grand Rapids Nov. 29.

30 and Dec. 1, according to announcement today by Robert D. Lynd, secretary of the Birmingham Y. M. C. A. The conference will bring together boys from all Hi Y clubs in the lower peninsula. Several well known men are on the program. Among them are Alonzo A. Stagg, coach of the Chicago University football team; Dr. Roland Schloerb, pastor, Hyde Park Baptist Church, Chicago; and Gordon W. Kingsbury, official of the General Motors corporation. Officers will be elected in the general session which will close the conference. Many discussions groups under leaders also are planned.

GREECE READY FOR NEW LIFE

As Greek refugees gradually enter into the normal life of their regained country, and as civil strife in the country is being solved through the leadership of Eleutherios Venizelos, the way is opening for new prosperity and progress in Greece, in the opinion of George D. Pappageorgopoulos, editor of the first Greek-language newspaper in the United States.

Greece stands today as one homogeneous country, without any minority problem of importance, Mr. Pappageorgopoulos said, and this fact, whatever may be the magnitude of the problems brought by the returned Greeks from Turkey, means that the future of the country is promising. No longer need perpetual bickerings with Bulgaria, Turkey, or Slavic countries disturb the normal progress of Greek life. For the first time in centuries, Greece is able to concentrate on her own development, rather than to dissipate her energies in fruitless frontier disputes.

Mr. Pappageorgopoulos is the editor of Prometheus, a Greek-language newspaper published in San Francisco, and he is in Boston for the first time. It was founded in Boston the first Greek newspaper in the United States, the Paionion, and now, as well as his Greek-language paper, he issues a review, the Hellenic Library, in English.

The best solution of the refugee problem has been the scattering of the newly returned countrymen all over Greece, not in colonies, but in the very families of the original Greeks themselves, Mr. Pappageorgopoulos said. This method makes for economic equilibrium, and assimilates the new to the old populations completely and satisfactorily.

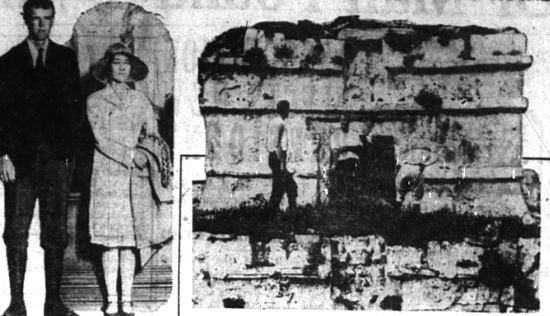

Mr. Pappageorgopoulos has long been a loyal American, and his publications never tire of exhorting his 600,000 countrymen in the United States to give their full devotion and allegiance to this country. He is somewhat of a philosopher, and his reflections have led him to believe that in America is being recaptured gradually the ideal which once flourished in ancient Greece. He is convinced that as America's wealth accumulates, she will be enabled to produce a culture of high order, and he points out that upon wealth culture always depends.

In the following unfolding of this new American culture, Mr. Pappageorgopoulos is convinced that his fellow Greco-Americans will play an important part, for he sees in the "melting pot" one of the greatest sources of American strength.

WHEN LINDY EXPLORED CENTRAL AMERICAN RUINS

It would have taken an ordinary expedition five years to do the work, but it took only 25 hours for Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh, his wife and party to make an aerial exploration tour of Mayan ruins in Central America. At left, above, Colonel Lindbergh and Mrs. Lindbergh are shown as they returned to Miami, Fla., after their expedition.

GOVERNMENT SURGEONS GO INTO CONSULTATION FOR YEARLY OPERATIONS

By HOWARD P. JONES
Central Press Staff Writer
Chicago.—"Doctors of government" from throughout the United States will assemble here Nov. 12-14 for the National Conference on Improving Government.

When something goes wrong with government, these men are called in to fix it. They are as and problems of cities with respect to aviation and elections. They're most all professors and doctors of philosophy, with degrees and academic honors following their names in "Who's Who," but they're real men who take off their coats and roll up their sleeves and go at this job of improving government in dead earnest.

Then, too, there will be specialists on taxes and traffic regulation thoroughly specialists in their field as any surgeon in his. You show them a sick government, and they'll not only tell you what's the matter, but what to do about it.

For instance, there's Richard S. Childs, president of the National Municipal League, better known as "father of the city manager plan," but who has fathered as well, nearly every governmental improvement of the past two decades. It was he who shared with Woodrow Wilson, honors for originating the short ballot movement, which has spread throughout the country. His latest hobby—for all this is a hobby with Childs, who, during eight hours of every day, is an executive in a huge New York corporation—is the county manager plan.

Who? Other As? Then there is Luther Gulick, chairman of the Governmental Research Association, and a director of the National Institute of Public Administration. As research director of the New York State Special Joint Commission on Taxation and Retrenchment, he has doctored local government for years. His organization is at present, engaged in making a survey of the government of New Jersey.

And Lent D. Upson, and C. E. Rightor, of the Detroit Bureau of Governmental Research. The sums these men have saved the taxpayers of Detroit through installation of more efficient administration methods run into millions, Detroit business men admit.

There will be John A. Fairlie, the local government expert of the University of Illinois, and A. R. Hatton of Northwestern University, who drew up the city manager charters for Cleveland and Cincinnati.

And if we talk of crime waves and police problems, there's C. Bruce Smith of the International Association of Chiefs of Police, who has probably seen inside of more police departments than any other non-criminal living.

TWO EDGED SWORDS CUT BOTH WAYS

The electric current which turns the wheels of industry, cooks or refrigerates your food, lights your home or brings to you through the air entertainment and news from the whole wide world can be just as great a power for harm if not properly controlled.

In many ways medicines may be likened to it. They can be factors which contribute to infinite good or harm in accordance with how or when they are used and depending upon all manner of circumstances.

The person without medical training should no more attempt to diagnose and treat illness than should the average person attempt experiments with a high voltage electric current.

Whenever illness threatens get your physician's attention with the least possible delay. That is the sure way to live longer than you otherwise might.

Make this your prescription headquarters. We are always prepared to do such work as your physicians would have it done.
