RECREATION IN LIFE
Recreation in Community Life. Mark 2:18-28

The general title of this lesson is "Respect for Rightful Authority." It is the World's Temperance Lesson, and it has evidently been chosen with reference to the problem of law dealing with the liquor traffic, but which is particularly emphasized at the present day in America.
The fact that in this country the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquor is prohibited by law and the Constitution has not as yet eliminated the need for personal attitudes and the exercise of personal will in relation to actual matters of liquor drinking. Those who lay great stress on education and the voluntary practice of total abstinence, as against the exercise of law in dealing with the liquor problem, overlook the fact that there is still a field for education and voluntary total abstinence has lost nothing of its practical value.

HALLOWEEN

To enjoy the spooky spirit of Hallowe'en the youngsters must have Masks and Noisemakers

Grown-ups, too, will need Masks and Dominoes and decorations... and the evening will be much more enjoyable if a box of candy is kept circulating.

The Will Still Rules
It is still possible for one voluntarily to abstain from intoxicating liquors and the fact that such abstinence is in harmony with the spirit of the law does not in any way lessen the value of voluntary action.
The passing of such drastic measures as prohibition emphasizes various aspects of the problem of maintaining law in a democracy and the questions concerning the relation of individual liberty and conscience to the state. It ought to be recognized by those who believe in prohibition or not, that it is a drastic measure. Any law that interferes with the habits and customs of a large part of people in the community is drastic, even if those habits and customs should be indefensible and socially harmful.
What many who oppose prohibition because it is so drastic, it overlooks is that all law is drastic and much of the legislation of the same order is in effect and the rigorous interference and activity of law to correct social abuses and to further the general welfare.
As one who strongly favors the continuance of what President Hoover has rightly called "a noble experiment," I am convinced that the future of prohibition must ultimately be decided upon the soundness or unsoundness of the claim that it has made for more liberty for all. The days of legalized drinking may have established more liberty for men only; but when one takes into account all in the community, men, women and children, it is an interesting thing to consider fairly whether even drastic laws that seem superficially to interfere with personal liberties have not been instrumental in establishing larger liberty for all.

It is difficult to discuss such a lesson as we have here without reference to these backgrounds and problems of life today. These are the things that bring before us the same sort of questions that people brought to Jesus and to Paul for decision.
The three passages in our lesson from Mark, Romans and I Peter are all strongly uphold the authority of the state; but it would be easy to show from the New Testament that this authority was upheld only where it did not conflict with some higher authority of truth or righteousness. Paul it is clear that the great end of society is not law, but through law and every other constructive means the life of society and its citizens whose personal acts and relationships with one another are such that if there were no law the life of society would be ideal. The end and purpose of law in society is to establish that well diversified life which requires no law.
It should always be remembered that the great end of society is not law, but through law and every other constructive means the life of society and its citizens whose personal acts and relationships with one another are such that if there were no law the life of society would be ideal. The end and purpose of law in society is to establish that well diversified life which requires no law.

is such a simple CREED

We cannot always have our plans fulfilled. Every onmarching of life brings its great changes. But principles are permanent.

Faithfulness to the public—a simple creed—is such a principle. Upon it, great organizations have reared their structures. Upon it, businesses have outlasted generations. We, ourselves, have found this principle virile in its results. It has made of the Birmingham Department Store an organization of distinct service, whose very progress permits new standards of worth and quality.

As the unchanging ideal of every co-worker in our store, this creed justifies our expectation that our organization has but partly reached its destiny and that for the years to come there will be work for many to do and achievements worthy of still higher public trust.
