(Special to The Eccentric.) Pontiac, Sept. 18.—Thomas J. Gordon, formerly of Birmingham, will be sentenced by Judge Frank L. Covert in circuit court, Pontiac, Monday at 1:30 p. m. for his second violation of the prohibition law. He was found guilty by a jury Tuesday afternoon. Meanwhile he is at liberty under bail of $2,000.

Burton P. Daugherty, county clerk, was one of the state's witnesses against the man. Gordon denied he owned the large quantity of liquor exhibited by the prosecution which was taken from his home after a raid by deputies. He said he had no knowledge of how it got into his home in Waterford Township outside the Pontiac city limits.

This was Gordon's second arrest on a charge of violating the prohibition law. He pleaded guilty to running a place in 1927 and was sentenced to from five months to one year at the Detroit House of Correction and paid costs of $200. Gordon is married and has a young daughter. The wife and child sat with him in the court room during the trial.

Prosecutor Norman C. Orr and Assistant Prosecutor Charles L. Wilson represented the state's case. The following jurors were drawn Tuesday morning to sit in the case: Howard Osmus, Frank Coe, A. W. Winderman, Elmer Claxton, M. D. MacAuley, Essie E. Joy, Ida Edmiston, Fred Congdon, Elmer Allen, Glenn Wilkins, Stanley Todd and Byron Pettit.
