BOOK REVIEWS

By SALLY KNOX

THE DOOR, by Mary Roberts Rhinehart. Farrar and Rhinehart, publishers. In this age of mass production, quantity has frequently been counted as of more importance than quality. Now, a mystery story with but one murder in it would scarcely turn hair in the reader's head.

By sheer force of numbers, Mary Roberts Rhinehart's latest mystery story, "The Door," is a success, for it contains four murders and three murderous assaults, which is probably, about as much as the average reader could digest in the space of 300 pages. Thrills galore, fast movement, and an ever increasing interest are consequently assured the reader.

Such a statement is a little unfair, however, to Mrs. Rhinehart, who has written a book rich in literary value, and one which, although gory with murders, sacrifices thereby none of the stylistic charm of a Rhinehart novel. Most mystery novels, we have found, have been devoid of literary quality, and have been asetic as to style.

Mrs. Rhinehart imparts originality to her book by the individual device of having it come supposed by from the pen of a middle aged spinster, endowed with moderate wealth, with humor, and a sort of erratic naturalness. She is rather a fascinating old lady, whose life before the succession of murders, disappearance and assaults has been one of uninterrupted peace and routine. The series of crimes which burst suddenly like bombs about those closest to her leaves her somewhat bewildered and not a little shocked. But her spirit is far from broken, and the aftermath of these eventful weeks is that she meditates on crime sitting in the library, and finding it a little difficult to be interested in the food, which now provides the only variation in her life; when formerly she had been daily stirred up, if not entertained, by a new complication in a badly tangled situation.

This middle-aged spinster tells the story in her own rather erratic way, not in chronological order, but as the events are reflected in her mind. She sometimes anticipates events which will not take place until chapters ahead and then returns to her correct place in the narrative. But never does she give us a shadow of a clue to the identity of the arch-criminal until the last page. As she herself was surprised at the name the detective spoke, so the reader is kept in suspense throughout the book.

The detective who in the end works out and explains the solution has a minor role, although he too is painted in character and well done. Following the usual tricks of the mystery story trade, the author casts suspicion for the crime on nearly every member of the family in turn, as well as outsiders, before she finally divulges the name of the real criminal. A love story adds a pleasing touch to the narrative.

"The Door" we can say then, is a very good mystery story, but more than that, it is also a well written novel.

TELEPHONE NOW LINKS S. AMERICA

Service Between Michigan And Latin Continent Opens Today

Regular telephone service between North America and South America will be available to the public beginning noon, today according to announcement by C. M. Ritchie, manager here for the Michigan Bell Telephone company.

This new service will interconnect twenty million telephones in the United States, as well as all telephones in Cuba, and all the principal points in Mexico and Canada, with the telephones in the Argentine Republic and with the cities of Santiago in Chile and Montevideo in Uruguay.

The link between the two continents will be a short wave radio telephone circuit, 5,300 miles in length, connecting the overseas radio stations of the American Telephone & Telegraph company in the United States with the International Telephone & Telegraph Corporation's stations in the vicinity of Buenos Aires.

The service will be in operation eight hours daily, from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m. Eastern time. The rate for a three-minute conversation between all points in Michigan and all points in the Province of Buenos Aires (the first South American zone) will be $39. The second South American zone includes the remainder of Argentine and Montevideo, Uruguay. An extra charge of $1.20 will be for calls to that zone. For calls to zone 3, which includes Santiago, Chile, a charge of $3 is added to the base rate.

The authorities have found that J. R. Kaston, aged 42, of Chicago, gives up a $15-a-week job every winter and enters the poor house, where he stays until spring.

The Aberdeen Angus steer, "Lucky Strike," raised in Iowa, was awarded the grand championship prize at the recent livestock show in Chicago, and was auctioned for $7,285.
