

INDIVIDUALITY BEST EXPRESSED BY WOMEN'S HAIR, COIFFEUR SAYS

"Hairdressing is one of the most expressive, means of emphasizing the individual style of a woman, and that is why hair-cutting and hair waving cannot be done mechanically," said Monsieur Niel Simmel, expert coiffeur and an artist in hair cutting, who is now connected with the Marguerite Beauty Salon in Birmingham.

The clerk will advise you. Then open up the hem on the hose and start from the top—if they have cotton hems use that, too—and cut round and round in one continuous strip to the toe. The width of the strip depends on the weight of the hose and the weight you wish your rug and the size of your needle. Sheer chiffon hose must be cut nearly twice as wide as service weight.

For an oblong rug you chain several stitches, depending on the size you are going to make. Then catch into each stitch with a single down one side, around the end and then down the other side. Add stitches at the corner enough to keep the work flat—usually one additional stitch to each corner on each row. To do this go into the same stitch twice.

MacDonald Smith's Swing

By ROY GROVE

Central Press Golf Writer THERE IS no greater stylist in golf than MacDonald Smith. He sticks strictly to form and the correct way of getting the ball out there instead of trying to develop his own style.

Smith does not hit the ball and stop. He hits through and far through. I mean he hits and keeps on hitting until he has finished the stroke naturally. Smith hesitates at the top of his swing, comes to an absolute stop on his back stroke, before he comes down with the club.

The average golfer swings so hard on the backswing that he has the club far from his control and in doing so starts his whole body down for the ball before he starts the club.

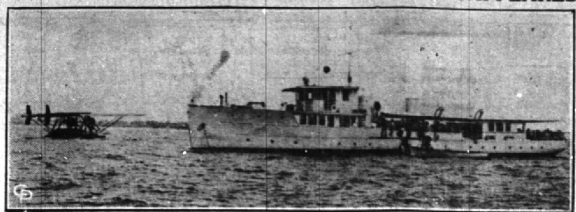

Always remember this: Hit the ball with the club and not with the hips. The shoulder and the body action should follow the arms and the hands. Thus the weight is behind the ball and not out ahead of it.

Try slowing up your swing as Smith does, slow it up to a point where you think you are working too slow and then slow it up some more. After that you will find you are still hitting the ball faster than you should.
