

24 MORE BOYS GO TO Y' CAMP

Village Youths Leave On Sunday For Two Weeks At Loom Lake

Reports of the camp life at Loom Lake, under the direction of the Y. M. C. A., have aroused much interest in camp life among Birmingham boys. In addition to the 24 new Birmingham boys who left Sunday for the third camp period, which last two weeks, 12 boys, who went to the camp for the previous two weeks, have decided to stay through this period. Although the camp is fitted to accommodate only 112 boys, about 120 have signed up for the final period, which comes during the last two weeks in August.

The camp program is very well arranged and provides activity that will develop the physical, mental and moral qualities of the boys, Mr. Lynd said. The young campers arise at 7 a. m. and eat an early breakfast following which they take their "morning dip." Daily house cleaning programs follow at which time the tents are cleaned and the camp grounds put in order.

Two hours are set aside each morning for "project work" when the boys may receive instructions in any of the 32 crafts offered. The crafts include sketching, model boat and airplane building, leather craft, nature study, camp craft, first aid, life saving, boating and fishing crafts.

All Must Swim

Every boy in the camp must learn to swim, therefore a period is set aside in the morning for swimming instruction. The boys are grouped for swimming according to their qualifications, whether beginners, intermediates or advanced students. Luncheon and then a rest period until 2:30 p. m. follows. The next three hours are spent in hiking and swimming, preceding dinner.

An hour of recreation is permitted after dinner and the boys may play games, swim or join in other sports. The camp "turns in" at 9 p. m. and each tent is dark and quiet for the night at 9:30 p. m.

Following are the boys who went to camp Sunday for the third period: Albert Ashwell, John and Manley Botting, Frank Cavan, Tom Colcott, Francis Dixon, Donald Ellenwood, George Frye, Jack Hogan, Irving Jones, Donald McDonald, Ross Morgan, John Murphy, Frank Phillips, Edmund Quail, Gerald Rochester, Robert and Roy Uhlman, James Mellroy, Hilary Craig, Henry Foley, Douglas Herick, Richard Browner, and Thomas Lawton.

A Gardener Tells Best Way To Grow Prize Delphiniums

Mr. W. L. Barbour of "Briarbank," Bloomfield Hills, after 25 years of experimenting and collecting now has the finest possible Delphinium strains, according to Mr. James Gologgie, head gardener. At the Bloomfield Hills and District Horticultural show last June, the Barbour Delphinium entries won two first prizes.

The winning Blackmore and Langdon Delphinium strains cannot be surpassed, according to Mr. Gologgie. The six special Blackmore and Langdon strains grown on the Barbour estate are the Lady Edith, an unusually large semi-double blossom of a charming shade of lavender with a dark eye; the Lady Augusta, a rich deep blue with a black and gold center; the Violet Robinson, a rich, violet-blue with moderate size, white eye; the Lady Elizabeth, a perfectly formed, circular blossom in lavender and blue; the Lady Grace, a rich, deep cornflower blue; the Lady Irene, sky-blue with small black center; and the Lady Macbeth, a rich, rosy purple.

Not Hard to Grow

Mr. Gologgie, speaking on the care of Delphiniums, said that a good open soil, not too clayey, was the ideal soil for the flowers, and that they are not difficult to grow. "In the fall when the Delphiniums are cut down," said Mr. Gologgie, "loosen up the roots with a fork and work a handful of bonemeal into them. As a precaution against slugs, cover around about with coal ashes. In the spring-time, when the Delphiniums come up through the ground and begin to get foliage, dust with sulphur as a precaution against rot, black spot and mildew. A good thing to do when your Delphiniums are through blooming is to sow your seed immediately and not to hold it over for another year as it will deteriorate.

"When the young seedlings of Delphinium are planted in the fall for the following year, cover in between the rows and round about the plant with wood ashes. Delphinium should be lifted and the roots split every three years. Sow the seeds in spent hot beds or in flats, in which the soil should be composed of sand, good rich, light soil and leaf mould. The plant requires a great deal of water.

350 VILLAGE GIRLS BEING TAUGHT HOW TO SWIM IN BARNUM POOL

Mrs. Charles Richards, a substitute physical education instructor in the Birmingham schools last year and a former gymnasium teacher at Oak Park, Ill., is now assisting Mrs. George Engel at the new Barnum School pool with the direction of 350 girl student swimmers ranging from six to 18 years of age. Mrs. Richards' appointment to the school board was necessitated by the great increase of students.

The beginners, who a few weeks ago entered the swimming pool without any knowledge of swimming and some of them dubious even as to the pleasure of entering the water, now race down the halls of the school in an endeavor to be first in the water. Forty-three of the girls have passed at the beginners' test, which necessitates jumping into water over the aspirant's head and swimming 50 feet.

Mrs. Engel considers the beginners' test more difficult than the swimmers' test. It consists of five events: 100 yard swim using at least two kinds of strokes; back jump 50 feet using legs only and floating; surface dive in six to eight feet of water and recovery of object; dive—plain, front, or racing start; and without demonstration of artificial respiration. Thirty girls are now classed as swimmers.

Swimmers Classified

Six girls who were non-swimmers when they enrolled at Barnum pool have passed both the beginners' and the swimmers' examinations. The girls are Jean Ellis, Alice Savage, Esther Schultz, Louise Mignerey, and Virginia and Lois Lockrow.

When a child first comes to the pool, she is enrolled and classified as to her swimming prowess. Each time the class in which she is registered meets, she is given a card to present to the locker room matron, and a button for her bathing suit, signifying whether she is a beginner or a swimmer.

Twenty-eight swimmers are registered in the life saving class and they are working hard during their six hour previous instruction requirement before they are examined for their junior life saving badge. A few are attempting to fulfill the requirements for the highest honor that can be earned at the Barnum pool.

The pool is open nine hours a day, 64 hours a week and any child residing inside the Birmingham school district is eligible to register in the classes.
