

TELLS WOMEN WHAT TO READ

Mrs. Nancy B. Thomas, Librarian, Advises Rotary Ann Members On Books

What the woman of 30 should read consists largely in keeping informed of the events in a busy world. Mrs. Nancy B. Thomas, of the Baldwin Public Library, indicated in a talk Monday at a meeting of the Rotary Ann held at the home of Mrs. Henry Manley, of Greenwood avenue.

Mrs. Thomas, spoke to the members on what a woman of 30 should read. Foremost in the day's reading, come the newspapers, said Mrs. Thomas, which should be perused carefully but not lengthily. Owing to the fact that the "lead" of every newspaper story carries its most important items, scanning the first few lines of each article ought to be sufficient to keep one up on the news, Mrs. Thomas believes. About 20 minutes a day is enough time to devote to the newspaper, according to her talk.

She also made the point that both editorials and the comic strips ought to be followed from day to day. Explaining her stand on the comic strips, Mrs. Thomas said that one who did not know the fortunes of a popular "funny page" here was almost as behind the times as one unacquainted

Sets Record

Billie Brown, above, 24-year-old office worker of El Monte, Calif., set a new woman's record for parachute jumping when she leaped from an airplane 15,000 feet above ground recently. She landed 10 miles from the point above which she jumped, receiving only a few minor bruises. The former record of 8200 feet was held by a German girl.

The speaker suggested that every woman follow three types of magazines, a good home magazine, a news magazine and a literary magazine. On the subject of books, Mrs. Thomas urged her hearers to read worthwhile ones, and not to waste their time on trash. One should read every year a dozen or more books, which at the end of the year, would stand out in the memory of the reader, with the title, author, characters and principal points still in his recollection. Asked how to select such books from among the recent releases, she advised members of the club to follow book reviews in magazines and newspapers, and to take into consideration the reputation of the author and the publisher.

Assisting Mrs. Manley in the arrangements for the luncheon were Mrs. Clarence Vliet, Mrs. Ralph E. Evertal, and Mrs. George B. Boutwell.

NEW TEACHER WED RECENTLY

Birmingham acquaintances of the former Miss Margaret Holmes, of Detroit, the new teacher who succeeded Miss Evangeline Purcell at the Baldwin High School, Dec. 30, have heard with interest recently of her marriage to Mr. F. J. Siang, of Mt. Clemens, on Jan. 4, in Monroe.

Miss Holmes and Mr. Siang were married quietly in St. John's Church, attended by Miss Loretta Grimmins, of Monroe, and Mr. Victor Siang, of Mt. Clemens, brother of the groom. The couple will reside in Mt. Clemens, where Mr. Siang is employed by the Michigan Federated Utilities Co.

"Sacrament" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in the Christian Science Churches on Sunday, January 12.

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "Jesus saith unto him, I am the way, the truth, and the life: no man cometh unto the Father, but by me" (John 14:6).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Consecration is good does not lessen man's dependence on God, but heightens it. Neither does consecration diminish man's obligations to God, but shows the paramount necessity of meeting them" (p. 262).

The WORLD and All

One of the best dog stories I have read in a long time is "The Honorable Charley," by Philip Curtis recently published in a little volume by Harper's. The story originally appeared in Harper's magazine, but I missed it.

This story interests me because Charley, the hero of the tale, reminds me so much of Nero, the big Newfoundland dog who was my playmate when I was a boy on a Kansas farm.

Charley resembles Nero in size and in several of his characteristics, but Charley is absurd and clownish, while Nero was always dignified and sedate.

Nero was a thoroughbred Newfoundland, of gigantic size. We got him from a friend in Wichita when he was a tiny pup. He grew up, lived and died on the farm. So far as I know, he never left the premises.

I am reminded of Nero when the writer of the Charley tale tells how his big hero used to sit on a dog that tried to fight with him.

Nero was much too big and too noble to fight with any other dog. There was no dog within the circle of his acquaintance that was big enough for him to fight. The neighbors across the road had four of five cubs, and sometimes all of them would run and snap at Nero. Many times I have seen the big Newfoundland trot along, head up, never even laying back his ears in annoyance, with the pack snapping at his legs, barking and acting perfectly wild.

But sometimes Nero would lose patience. Then he would lay down whatever he was carrying in his mouth, and would knock over the biggest of his tormentors with one swipe of one front paw. While the enemy howled in terror, Nero would sit on him, and with punishing jaw upraised, would show all his teeth and roar like a lion. The whole pack of enemy dogs would run for home at sight of this terrifying spectacle, and Nero, arising, would go back and pick up his burden and trot smilingly home.

We had rural mail delivery. Nero would go a quarter of a mile to the crossroads and wait for the carrier. He would come home with the mail carefully between his teeth. Then he would ask for food.

Nero used to fill the woodbox in the kitchen for me. It was my chore, and I hated it. I trained Nero to pick up firewood and bring it right into the kitchen, dropping it into the yawning woodbox.

I think Nero was one of the most intelligent of all dogs. It is my understanding of fire that makes me chuckle over this clever story of the big dog Charley.

SPEEDER PAYS FINE
Speeding 45 miles an hour in Woodward avenue cost Louis Markowitz, 45 years old, 1300 Linwood avenue, Detroit, $15 Monday when he appeared before Justice Malcolm Hunt. Markowitz was arrested by Patrolman James Anderson.
